HARVARD TEAM IS CRIPPLED

By E. V. B. Parke.

OLD ELM TREE INN, Farmington, Ct., Nov. 17.—Harvard stock slumped to-day and Yale hopes went booming up when it became known that Ted Frothingham, one of the fleetest of the Harvard backs and the best drop-kicker on the Crimson team, is ill, so much so that he is not even with the team.

Frothingham is suffering from jaundice. Wigglesworth, the quarterback, has but recently recovered from an attack of the same malady.

Frothingham was not well enough to accompany the team here, but remained in the Stillman Infirmary in Cambridge. The Harvard coaches are a bit worried lest this disease crop out among the other players. Special precautions are being taken to guard against it. The men are being watched as though they were criminals.

Practice on Yale Field.

Eighteen of the Harvard football squad, including backs, ends and centres, left the historic old inn in a big rickety barge early to-day for New Haven, where for an hour this afternoon they have their only practice on Yale field before the big game with Yale.

The idea of taking these men to New Haven was to let them become accustomed, as much as possible, to the lights on Yale field, which are distinctly different from those in the Stadium, where the high stone walls shut off much of the light. Were this not done, the backs would be badly hampered in catching punts, which the ends would find great difficulty in following the ball under kicks and on the forward pass.

Then men who took the trip were: Leslie, Tryon, Corbett, Wendell, Campbell, Graustein, Morrison, Pierce, Wigglesworth, Potter, Gardner, Lewis, L. Smith, Felton, O'Flaherty, Perkins and Huntington.

The trip from Boston proved very tedious, the train arriving at Hartford half an hour late, and when the men finally reached the Country Club where they take their meals, while in Farmington, they started after the sumptuous plain food set before them, like young bears. Everyone arose, greatly increased both in size and weight. No one attempted to weigh in after the meal, as it was figured out that if their weights in that condition were given out, Yale might ask for a handicap on the grounds of being greatly outweighed.

Good-Bye to Yale.

When the crowd sighted at Hartford there were approximately a thousand school boys and girls on the platform waiting to get a look at the mighty gridiron warriors, and as Captain Withington and Bob McKay, both giants in stature, passed by, one of the more facetious boys came out with "Goodby to Yale," raising a good laugh.

A special trolley took the men to the Elm Tree Inn at Farmington, where the men were assigned to their rooms and then made a bee line for the Country Club and the "eats."

The meal proved to be a rip-roaring affair, formality being cast to the winds, and high jinks reigned, but this soon gave place to a long blackboard talk by Coach Haughton and a little talk on the ethics of feeding by the ever watchful physical guardian of the team—"Pooch" Donovan.

After frolicking about for a while the squad returned to the inn where various games of cards were indulged in. Several of the less shy young gladiators essayed a trip down the main street to have a look at the far-famed Farmingham Girls' School. Being a very select establishment, the girlies were securely hidden from the impertinent gaze of Harvard men by heavy green curtains and their walk proved in vain.

Warriors Scare Girls.

This morning, however, several groups of young women, and there were some classy ones among them—strolled nonchalently by the inn to have a purely casual glance at the much-touted Harvard boys. And they had their look, for someone announced their coming, and immediately the whole team was on the outside and the tender lassies fled precipitately. One less fortunate of the fair ones, hindered by a "hobble" skirt, had a hard time making good her escape.

Everyone arose sharp at 8 this morning and while dressing amused themselves by throwing pictures, glasses and other handy articles at some five dozen stray, docile tabbies, warming themselves in the sun on the lawn. The cats had been reported deported, but the report seems to have been erroneous.

Every man here got up in the best possible condition, and ate a hearty breakfast, as the brisk, cold country air seems to agree with them. If they continue improving till Saturday as rapidly as they have done in the last ten hours, Yale will have eleven young tigers to meet and not a docile football team.

Those players who went to New Haven, however, had their lunch at the "Commons," the big Yale dining hall, after which they took a special car to the field. They were expected to come back to the wilds of Farmington about 5:30, leaving New Haven on the 4:01 train.

To-morrow a cross-country walk and signal drill on the Country Club links in the afternoon will be the only work the men will have and then there will be a rest till the whistle blows and the Crimson battering ram makes its attack on the Yale bull dog on Yale Field.

HOW IT LOOKS IN CAMBRIDGE

CAVALIERI HERE ABOUT DEC. 1

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Oreste Cavalieri, brother and business agent of Mme. Lina Cavalieri-Chanler, arrived here from Europe today, upon the George Washington with the information that the international nuptial and financial controversy between his sister and Robert Winthrop Chanler, was far from settled.

"Several offers have been made to my sister by the Chanler family but she has spurned them all," said Cavalieri. "They are trying very hard to get back the contract which Mr. Chanler signed, giving part of his estate to my sister, but they have failed. They cannot keep Mme. Cavalieri out of this country. She will arrive about Dec. 1. She would have been here by this time except for poor health. There is no truth in the report that my sister has accepted $25,000 from the Chanlers to stay out of the United States." Mme. Nordica, who came over on the same ship referred to Mme. Cavalieri as a "poor little girl who wanted a home and a husband.

35 PEOPLE ROUTED BY QUINCY BLAZE

Thirty-five lodgers in the Madison House, Quincy, were driven to the street in their night clothing when fire broke out in the hotel shortly after daybreak. The Madison House is on South street in the thickly populated resident section near the Fore River works, and it was with great difficulty that the firemen prevented the flames from spreading. One of the roomers opening his door found the hallway filled with smoke. The fire was caused by a defective flue. The house is owned by Mrs. Lawrence Peters and occupied by Mrs. James Simms. The loss is $800.

EVERETT WOMAN 100 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

Mrs. Mary L. Chase of No. 9 Parlin street, Everett, to-day celebrated her one-hundredth birthday with relatives and friends, near and far surrounding her, feasting and tendering their congratulations. She is living at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ransom Currier. Mrs. Chase was born in Warner, N. H., from whence she moved, at the time of her marriage, to Waterford, N. Y., and afterward to Everett, where she has lived seventy years.

MRS. B. F. KEITH'S FUNERAL TO-MORROW

The funeral of Mrs. Mary C. Keith, wife of Benjamin F. Keith, who died at her home, No. 310 Kent street, Brookline, yesterday, will be held at St. Mary's Church of the Assumption, Brookline, to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock.

EVERYTHING TO WOMEN

It means everything to a woman to get all the news of all the progressive stores in her evening paper.

A glance at the advertising columns of the AMERICAN, to-day, to-morrow or any time, will convince any intelligent person that this paper has no equal in the evening field as a full and complete guide to the bargain counters of BOSTON'S big and little stores.

300 MEXICANS INVADE TEXAS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—A dispatch from Rock Springs, Tex., says 300 Mexicans have crossed the Rio Grande and invaded Texas. Seventy-five rangers were sent to the outskirts of the town to resist any attack.

Governor Campbell of Texas later advised the State Department that he had no information of an expected battle between Americans and Mexicans on the frontier, especially at Uvalde. He telegraphed that he has officers on the ground and will take every precaution to prevent trouble on the border and in the counties.

While only the jingos anticipate any real trouble between Mexico and the United States, military experts are studying the situation carefully to-day and preparing for any eventualities. It was well understood here that if any open rupture between the two countries comes, it will be despite the utmost efforts of President Diaz, who is recognized as a thorough friend of America.

What the anti-Diaz forces will be able to bring about is a matter of uncertainty, though it is recognized even in official circles that the situation is strained. The immense business interests of American citizens in Mexico form the strongest deterrent to the development of any martial spirit.

Warfare would not find the United States unprepared. The troops stationed in the Southwestern forts are used to the rough country. There is no phase of military operations that could be unexpected. United States army officers have long made a study of the topography, natural resources, and railroads of countries adjacent to the United States. The Mexican fighting force of hardy rurales could offer serious resistance to the best organized army by adopting guerilla tactics. The lonely wastes of Mexico offer ideal locations for this kind of warfare.

The Mexican regular army possesses one advantage in possessing the new Mondragon type of rifle, an automatic gun of great accuracy and range. The United States attempted to secure this rifle, but the Mexican Government placed a higher bid for it. It is understood that the Meixcan Government has placed an order for the construction of 10,000 of these rifles in Switzerland.

$1,000 HOUSE FIRE IN WEST ROXBURY

While Dr. Errado Baldoni and family of No. 142 Willow street, West Roxbury, were eating breakfast to-day the upper part of the house caught fire. Had it not been for the presence of mind of a schoolboy who was passing, and who sounded the alarm, the damage would have been considerably more than $1,000, which the doctor says will cost him to make the repairs. The fire started in the top of the house near the chimney. The entire roof on the rear of the house was burnt.

GIACOMO PUCCINI ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Giacomo Puccini, the great Italian composer, arrived in New York to-day on the liner George Washington. He was accompanied by his brother, Anton, and his publisher, Tito Ricardi. Puccini was met by a number of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House, who greeted him effusively. Mme. Nordica, fresh from triumphs in London; Mrs. Collis P. Huntington, her son Archer Huntington, and his wife were also passengers.

NIGHT IN CELL FOR SPITTING

Four men had been arrested up to noon to-day as a result of the crusade ordered by Commissioner O'Meara to be started to-day against spitting on sidewalks. One man paid a fine of $10 in court to-day, while another paid $2.

The first man to be arrested was a resident of San Francisco. His name is Meyer Stone. He was arrested opposite No. 1,083 Washington street last night by Patrolman Nelson of the East Dedham Street Police Station.

At the station house Stone was offered his liberty if he could give $25 bail. He could not and so was locked up in a cell in the basement of the station house. Stone, who is twenty-two years old, spent the night in the cell. To-day he was hustled from his cell into the prisoners' van and then to the courthouse in Pemberton square. There he was arraigned before Judge Ely in the first session of the Municipal Court.

Clerk Ingalls read the complaint against Stone, charging him with violating the city ordinances by spitting on the sidewalk.

Stone Pleads Guilty.

"What say you?" asked the clerk. "Are you guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty," replied Stone.

Judge Ely then ordered Stone to pay a fine of $2. He paid the money and then left the court room.

Outside the court room Stone was greeted by a number of friends. They were indignant to think that he pleaded guilty. Stone told his reasons to a reporter.

"I didn't spit on the sidewalk," said Stone. "This cop had to arrest someone so he 'pinched' me. I pleaded guilty as it was the easiest way out of it. What's the fine, anyway? I haven't any money for a lawyer; so it was easier for me to pay the fine than to fight the case.

The second offender was Roy Fowler, who spat on the sidewalk in South Boston last night. He was arraigned before Judge Fallon. He pleaded guilty, but it cost him $10. He paid.

Mr. Stone Is Sore.

"It's a poor deal," said Stone after court. Wherever I go I'll roast this Hub. The officer came up to me and grabbed me by the arm. Took right ahold of me as though I was some crook and everybody looked at me with suspicion.

"I didn't spit on the sidewalk. I am sure I spit into the street. After we had walked along the policeman came back with me to the same place and tried to show me where I spit, but he couldn't. When I argued with him he said, 'None of that stuff. You'll have to come along.'

"All night I had to stay in that cell. They wanted $25 bail. I didn't have it.

"I feel sore. It's the first time I ever was in court on any kind of a charge, and I have travelled over this country. I'm an agent for the Thomas automobile in Frisco and I have driven in some amateur auto races. But I never was arrested before." Stone exhibited two chauffeur's licenses, one taken out in Reno, Nev., and one in Denver.

S. Goodwin, a friend of Stone's, had arranged for his defence and had brought a lawyer to the court. Stone pleaded guilty before his companion had a chance to tell him he had counsel.

What the Policeman Says.

Patrolman James Nelson, who arrested Stone said:

"We are not going to have these outsiders come in here and break our laws. Stone said he was from the Golden Gate and thought I was hard on him. Yes, he protested and says he will never come here again."

Commissioner O'Meara's anti-spitting crusade was ordered to commence to-day. By his orders one man is to be arrested in every one of the fifteen land divisions of the police department to-day. Friday two arrests and prosecutions are to be made and Saturday the number is to be increased to three. From Saturday on the number per day is to be three for each division which will mean forty-five arrests and prosecutions each day.

Commissioner O'Meara says that to arrest all the offenders would unnecessarily clog the courts so he has specified the number to be made each day. He also feels that the courts can easily take care of forty-five cases a day.

The commissioner has directed that men of respectable and intelligent appearance who look as though they might be able to pay their fines are to be arrested. Minors and persons who are apparently poor and ignorant are not to be taken into custody. Men accompanied by women and children are not to be arrested either.

The action of Mr. O'Meara follows a letter that he received from the board of trustees of the Boston Consumptives' Hospital, forwarded to him by Mayor Fitzgerald. The letter declares that much benefit can be derived from the enforcement of the law, as much danger follows the train of this "filthy" habit.

THANK TAFT FOR ESSEX COUNTY BOOM

President Taft was publicly thanked for the boom he has given the North Shore and Essex County by making Beverly his Summer home at the "Essex County Night" of the Boston Boot & Shoe Club. "To our distinguished and patriotic President, William Howard Taft, all New England, as well as Essex County, owes a debt of gratitude for the impetus he has given old Essex and the North Shore of Massachusetts as a Summer resting section by choosing it for his Summer home," said President Donovan in ending his speech.

DEBATE ON SHAKESPEARE.

The Adath Jeshurun Culture Circle will hold a debate this evening at Brunswick Hall, Brunswick street, Roxbury, on the question whether the "Merchant of Venice" shall be continued to be taught in public schools and presented on the stage, as a number of people claim that the "Merchant of Venice" creates race prejudice. The debate is open to the public. On November 28, the second public lecture will be delivered before the association at Brunswick Hall by ex-Governor Guild on "History of the Flag."

JACK JOHNSON NERVOUS WRECK

LOWELL, Nov. 17.—Jack Johnson is suffering from nervous prostration. The big champion loses his memory at times. Fearing that he might do some harm, he has had his wife take charge of his revolver.

Johnson will fill his theatrical engagements this week, after which he will cancel his bookings and take a rest, prescribed by a doctor. He is using medicine now to keep him up through the week.

"I'm not feeling right," said the "big fellow" in a surprising statement to-day. "The doctors tell me I've got nervous prostration. I never suspected that would strike me.

"Saturday night, at the Franklin Hotel in Lawrence, I lost my memory. I could not seem to understand what was going on. I knew that I was wrong, and I told my wife to take my revolver as something told me I might do harm with it.

"Then I ran to the nearest cold water faucet and let the water pour on my head. A doctor was called right away.

"In Haverhill I felt so bad Monday night that I cut out my monologue and limited myself to a boxing stunt. I attribute my condition to overwork. I haven't had a rest since my fight with Jeffries, and I suppose it's only natural that something should break. I'm going to take a long rest. I'm going to give up my world tour until I recover myself.

"I'll fill my bookings in Maine this week. Next Monday I was to be in New Bedford, but I've cancelled all bookings for the present.

SERVANT GIRL QUITS, EMPLOYER SUES HER

Rosy Birnbaum's sudden departure from the home of Louis Rosenberg at No. 5 Minot street, where she had been engaged as a domestic, had a sequel in the Municipal Court before Judge Murray when she claimed that she was discharged in the middle of a month's work, and, since being hired by the month, was entitled to a full month's wages—$20. Rosenberg on the other hand declares that he has been driven half frantic by his difficulties with the servant girl problem, and intends to find out whether Rosy, as an employe, was not as much bound to keep the contract as was he, the employer. Hence he claims that Rosy not only should not receive a month's wages, but should pay him $35 which he was forced to pay to get some one in her place for the rest of the month after her departure. Judge Murray withheld his decision.

HUSBAND FINED $10 FOR BEATING WIFE

John Freeman of No. 12 Dorchester street, South Boston, was arraigned before Judge Fallon in the Police Court in South Boston to-day, charged with abusing his wife. Mrs. Freeman told the court that her husband beat her daily. Patrolman Eaton corroborated her story. Freeman was fined $10. Judge Fallon said he would have sent him to jail, but that Freeman had a family to support. Freeman was given until Monday to pay the fine.

CENSUS MEN JAILED FOR PADDING LISTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Director Durand of the census gives out the population of Great Falls, Mont., as 13,948, a decrease of 982 from the 1900 figures. The original returns gave the place 23,324 or 9,376 more than the correct figures. Three enumerators found guilty of padding their lists were sentenced to jail and also fined.

AUSTRALIAN CENSUS IS SET AT 4,474,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Advance estimates of the population of the commonwealth of Australia, made by the federal statistician, places the total number of people in the six states at 4,474,000, according to consular reports received here.

FIVE FIREMEN ARE OVERCOME BY BACKDRAFT

Fire shortly before noon to-day destroyed the two-story wooden building occupied by Menge & Co. at No. 386 West First street, South Boston. The damage caused will exceed $20,000. Five firemen were partially overcome by smoke. They were in charge of Captain Caulfield of Engine company 48 and were fighting the fire at its fiercest point inside the burning building when a back draft enveloped them in smoke.

FIVE FIREMEN ESCAPE BY CRAWLING ON KNEES.

The men crawled from the building on their hands and knees. The men are: Charles Cardini, William Griffin, Maurice Flavin, Frank Martin and Albert Ver Kempen.

The building is occupied by the Menge Company, a New Orleans firm, manufacturers of sugar bags, as a cleansing and drying plant. The fire started in one of the drying rooms on the first floor. An overheated dryer set fire to some sugar coated bags and they burned fiercely.

In the rear of the building twelve Italian women were employed sewing bags. At the cry of fire they fled. All the employes escaped without harm.

The first alarm from box 142 was quickly followed by a second. The flames had spread throughout the structure. Fear was felt that they might spread to the Hill Cooperage Company's building to the East.

Warned Against Explosion.

During the progress of the fire Engineer Wiley, employed by the Menge company, warned the firemen against a hot-air explosion. He told them that one of the drying rooms was red-hot and air-tight. He said that an explosion would result if water were turned on this part of the building. Finally Wiley went into the basement and shut off the heat.

The members of company 48 at Andrews square were the first on the scene. Captain Caulfield sent five men with a line of hose into the building to direct a stream on the heart of the flames. A few minutes after they disappeared into the building the back draft occurred. The men escaped by clinging to each other's hands and groping their way out. They were blackened and choken when they reached the air.

When the first fire started six of the men employed in the Menge Company went into the office and picked up the safe, in which was a large sum of money and carried it to the street where it was guarded by policemen.

Four Horses Rescued.

Four horses were saved from a stable at the rear of the Menge building. They are the property of Thomas Walsh, a roofer. The stable was destroyed by the flames.

On the way to the fire the coal wagon of Engine No. 1 collided with a produce wagon on Dorchester street, South Boston. The coal wagon was driven by Roland McDonald. His back was wrenched and one finger was broken when he was thrown out.

The rear of the Menge building bordered the water and the fire boat was able to get within reach of the flames. Great work was done by the deck gun of Engine No. 15.

COUNT TOLSTOI DYING

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 17.—Count Tolstoi sank into a comatose state this afternoon and is dying, according to a dispatch from Astapovo received here at 5 p. m.

While Count Tolstoi was putting up a grim battle against death his wife collapsed again, and her condition is now exceedingly grave.

Tolstoi has a high fever, and his heart is irregular. He passed a restless night. His temperature this morning was 102. The real cause of the Countess' collapse, according to the report from Astapova, was a rebuff which her husband gave her while she was entreating him to return home. He warned his physicians not to admit her to his bedside again.

This action came as a great surprise, for the Count and Countess had become reconciled, and it was believed that the aged philosopher would consent to go home.

It is now believed that Tolstoi thought he was dying when he assented to his wife's affectionate plea of consenting to her wishes.

Had a Restless Night.

The aged author passed a restless night at the home of the station master at Astapova, to which he was removed when illness seized him during his attempted pilgrimage from Shamardino to the Caucasus, where he had hoped to end his days in solitude.

He was not pleased when the presence of his son Sergius was made known to him.

When Sergius entered the room and was recognized by his father, Tolstoi was plainly angry and showed his annoyance by asking, "Why did you come? How did you know that I was here?"

Son Angers the Count.

The young Tolstoi declared he had learned his father's whereabouts from a railroad conductor, but the Count was not satisfied with this explanation, and left no doubt of his feelings.

At the same time Tolstoi was delighted at the arrival of his friend, Count Vladimir Tchertkoff. The latter remains constantly at the bedside, with the physicians and Tolstoi's daughter Alexandra.

The crowd of press correspondents sent to the scene occupy the platform of the railway station. They have not been able to secure indoor sleeping quarters nor a place to eat. The family are living in a special car, which brought the Countess and her sons here. The only telegraph facilities are furnished by the operator at the flag station, and they are wholly inadequate.

RATE INCREASES ON 468 ROADS HELD UP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Through rates with tap line connections over the Kansas City Southern Railroad between Kansas City and New Orleans were suspended to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission until January 5, 1911. The commission suspended advances in rates made by 468 railroads operating in central, southern and official territory on shipments of locomotives and tenders until March 31 next.

CHARTER CLUB PRAISES FOSS

The Charter Association of Boston, of which Charles C. Jackson is secretary, has sent a letter to Governor-elect Foss, commending him for his stand in favor of publicity in connection with State matters, as outlined in Mr. Foss's exclusive interview in last Sunday's Boston American, and afterwards included in his Merchants' Club speech. It was in the interview that Mr. Foss made the happy phrase, "persistent, pitiless publicity." In a letter to the Governor-elect, the Charter Association says:

"The Charter Association endorses your policy as set forth sincerely and cordially. The Association was formed with a similar policy in view. The Association expresses the earnest hope that it may receive your co-operation in putting this policy into effect."

GIRL AWAITS TARDY SUITOR

You Fred George Corbett of Waltham—why weren't you at the dock when the Ivernia came in to-day to meet your sweetheart?

That's what Miss Maude Ellis from Lancashire, England, would like to know.

Miss Maude came over here second cabin, twenty-two years old and as comely and blushing a bit of English girlhood as one would wish to see.

The Ivernia docked at 8:30, maybe earlier than Fred George Corbett of Waltham thought she would. Miss Maude surveyed the dock with blushes, then with doubts and frowns and then with tears. No Fred George.

The immigration officials assured her that the trains from Waltham are often late and that Fred George was doubtless on the way in frantic haste at that very minute.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight London Time

20,000 Sign Petition For Crippen's Pardon.

LONDON—Twenty thousand persons, including members of wealthy and aristocratic families of England, have signed the petition which is aimed to save Dr. H. H. Crippen from execution next Wednesday for the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore Crippen. This is the largest number of names ever attached to an English petition praying commutation of a death sentence. The bulk of the signers are English, although Dr. Crippen is an American. Among the signers are many women and a few American residents of London. The petition recites that, in view of the doubt in the evidence which convicted Dr. Crippen, he should not be put to death.

Plan to Revise the Calendar.

BERLIN—The movement for the reform of the Gregorian calendar seems to be taking tangible shape. The Swiss Federal Council will invite all the nations to a conference with a view to adopting an arrangement by which every year will be divided into exactly fifty-two weeks or 364 days. New Year's Day is to be an "extra day." Sunday will bear no date. The four quarters of the year are to be exactly of the same length—the months 30, 30 and 31 days successively. Every leap year would have an off day that would neither be counted nor dated.

Kaiser Pleads for Religion.

BERLIN—The Kaiser, while visiting the Benedictine monastery at Beuren, to which he had previously presented a crucifix, addressed the abbot and a number of Roman Catholic dignitaries. He said: "I look to you to help me keep my people religious. This is very important, as the twentieth century has set loose ideas which can only be successfully combated with the help of religion and the support of heaven. The governments of Christian princes can only be carried on according to the will of the Lord. The altar and throne are closely united and must not be separated."

1,800 U. S. Tars See London.

LONDON—Historic Guildhall, where Theodore Roosevelt twisted the British lion's tail, will be the scene of a banquet of British and American naval officers. The corporation of London to-day issued an invitation to both the officers and crews of the United States battleships now at Gravesend. The United States Navy Department allows each sailor four days' time for sightseeing in London, and 1,800 came ashore to-day to hobnob with their British cousins. They were cheered as they landed and the town was at their disposal.

World's Biggest Ocean Liner.

LONDON—A gigantic ocean liner, the largest in the world, and one that is expected to stand for fifty years unequalled in splendor and dimensions, will be built for the Cunard line. The new leviathan will cost $5,000,000. She will accommodate 3,790 passengers, the apartments being arranged for 650 first-class passengers, 740 second-class, and 2,400 third-class. The new liner will ply in the Atlantic trade between Liverpool and New York.

Spanish Army Bill Hits Church.

MADRID—The new project of obligatory military service, now under discussion in the Senate, threatens further to complicate the relations between the Spanish Government and the Vatican, as it does not exempt either the secular or the monastic clergy. The Bishop of Madrid declares the bill violates the canonical law, authorizing ecclesiastical immunity, and is especially offensive in that it would deplete the ranks of the clergy.

Y. M. C. A. Bars Japanese.

HONOLULU—The application of Japanese Vice Consul Mori for membership in the Young Men's Christian Association has been rejected by the Board of Directors, which decided not to admit Japanese on the ground that the social incompatibility would militate against the usefulness of the organization.

Helsingfors Invites Prof. Andrews

HELSINGFORS, Finland—The University of Helsingfors has invited Professor Charles McLean Andrews of Yale, the historian, to deliver a series of lectures at the university in April on colonial history.

VESSEL TAKES 25 TONS OF RUM

Twenty-five tons of rum bound for Africa floated out of Boston harbor in the steamship Patricia. The consignment will be landed in Hamburg and transshipped. The freighter also had two carloads of shoe pegs, 100 tons of rags and hair, 13,000 bags of asbestos, 72,000 bushels of wheat and 10 tons of bran. The Patricia's cargo is the largest ever sent from Boston to Germany.

POISON VICTIM SCHENK BETTER

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 17.—John O. Schenk, the millionaire packer, whose wife is under arrest for his attempted murder, will recover. This announcement was made at the North Wheeling Hospital to-day. Prosecuting Attorney J. B. Handlan has completed his plans for the presentation of Mrs. Schenk's case before the Grand Jury to-morrow. Only enough witnesses will be called to insure the indictment of the woman, the prosecution not wishing to display its whole strength.

Handlan said to-day that he would try to have the case tried in the present term of criminal court and wants Mrs. Schenk indicted before her husband leaves the hospital. He asserted that he knew where the missing chauffeur, Lundy Wilson, is, and that he could get him on short notice. Dr. Frank Lemoyne Hupp, the physician who had charge of Mr. Schenk's case when poison was discovered in a bottle of lithia water, will be one of the principal witnesses. Another witness will be the detective chauffeur, who, it is alleged, was offered $1,000 to administer a poison pill to Mr. Shenck.

SNUB STARTS A SUFFRAGE WAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Open war will be declared to-night by the Belmont suffragist forces against Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, international president of the suffrage association, for what the Belmont people claim was an open insult to their leader at the suffrage meeting in Cooper Union last Friday night to celebrate the victory of suffragettes in the State of Washington. The affair was planned and paid for by Mrs. Belmont, and Mrs. Catt, through her position, was called on to preside. According to Mrs. Belmont's friends their leader was treated so rudely that she forgot her speech and was put to rout in her own meeting.

MISS PITKIN BRIDE TO-DAY

An important wedding to-day was that of Miss Martha Pitkin and Nathaniel William Niles, which took place in the Church of Our Savior in Longwood at 3:30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Reginald Heber Howe officiated, assisted by the Rev. Henry S. Washburn of Oyster Bay, L. I., an uncle of the bride. Miss Pitkin, who is a pretty and decidedly pleasing young miss, is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pitkin. Mr. Niles is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward S. Niles of Brookline. Mrs. Harold M. Turner of New York was the matron of honor and only attendant, while Alfred S. Dabney, Jr., Harvard, '11, was best man. The list of ushers included Louis S. Pitkin, a cousin of the bride, whose home is in New Haven; Frank Lucus Sutcliff of Halifax, England, and Cammeron Macleod, A. Nicholas Reggio, Frank Salloway and David Niles of Boston. Harold S. Pitkin gives his sister away.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chapman, 51 Strathmore road, where Mr. and Mrs. Chapman (the latter Miss Pitkin's sister) and Dr. and Mrs. Edward Niles assisted in receiving. The honeymoon will be spent at Virginia Hot Springs and upon their return the young couple will live at Richmond Court, Brookline.

BOSTON GIRL JOINS CARMELITE ORDER

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 17.—Miss Henrietta Dustin of Boston was invested with the habit of the Carmelite order by Bishop O'Connell at the Carmelite convent. Miss Dustin, who is the first woman to be received into the order in San Francisco, took the religious name of Sister Theresa. Sister Theresa, who is a very accomplished young woman, arrived from Boston six months ago to prepare for the ceremony. She was accompanied by her sister, who was present in the chapel when she was admitted to the order. She is said to have come from a wealthy Boston family.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

DODGERS INVITE ALL TO WEDDING

Everybody in the City Point section of South Boston knew that Jeremiah J. Mackin, familiarly known as "Jerry" was to be married yesterday, and they had no excuse for not knowing the name of the happy bride, nor the hour or place of the ceremony. They were fully informed on all these points, thanks to the bachelor friends of Mr. Mackin, who took a timely fiendish revenge for his desertion from the Squantum Camping Club, a supposedly ironclad bachelor organization of which their victim was one of the founders.

A Friendship Stroke.

Their stroke was worthy of Desperate Desmond himself. Mr. Mackin had invited his friends to the wedding yesterday but he deplored undue publicity. Early in the day boys distributed handbills reading as follows at every house in City Point:

"Hurrah!
Jerry Gets Married
Wednesday Morning
Souvenirs will be given
Free
To the public, at 10 a. m.
At 564 Fifth street."

A Musical Escort.

And that wasn't all. After the nuptial ceremony at the Gate of Heaven Church, which united Miss Margaret A. Sullivan to Mr. Mackin, the Rev. Robert J. Johnson officiating, the couple went to the home of the bride on East Fifth street, from whence they started on their honeymoon trip. As they left the house they were met by nearly a hundred friends and escorted several blocks. There were several band organs, playing the same tunes, but in different keys and times, and in front of the crowd was an immense banner bearing the words, "Jerry has just got married."

DIPLOMAT DELIGHTED T. R. WAS DEFEATED

Herbert H. D. Peirce of Washington, D. C., United States minister to Norway, gave every indication, when he arrived here on the Ivernia to-day, of being "delighted" at the way the election went against Colonel Roosevelt. When the reporters approached Mr. Peirce that gentleman began to grin. "Well," he said, "they sort of snowed Mr. Roosevelt under here, didn't they?" Then he asked for details about the election. He made no further comments, but he seemed highly gratified. Mr. Peirce, with Mrs. Peirce, is home for a two months' vacation. They will enjoy it traveling in their own country.

SPOILS HIS ALIBI IN GIRL MURDER CASE

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 17.—A serious break in the alibi offered by Thomas Williams, the negro suspected of the murder of nine-year-old Marie Smith, was discovered just as the police were on the point of releasing him. Chief [illegible] ascertained that Williams left Griffin's road house on Wednesday, November [illegible], the day the girl was killed, about 10:50 a. m. Williams declares he left the roadhouse about 12 o'clock. The medical evidence shows that the girl was murdered after 10:30 o'clock on that day, and witnesses have been found who say they saw Williams between 11 and 12 o'clock in the neighborhood of the spot where the body was found.

Buffum, Private W. J. Battilana, Sergeant E. M. Brush, Sergeant G. H. Farwell, Private D. B. Kensington, Sergeant B. S. Luther, Private R. R. Conant and Sergeant E. Feld.

APPORTIONMENT BILL FIRST FOR CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—One of the first important measures to receive the attention of the House early next month is the apportionment bill, which is to be taken up by the Census Committee soon after the House meets, December 5. There is a desire on the part of a majority of the House to keep the membership within 400 if possible, but the figures of State population thus far indicate that the membership of the House in the Sixty-third Congress will be nearly 410. The apportionment bill of the last census became a law January 16, 1901.

WILL INSTALL NEW OFFICERS AT DANCE

The Plymouth Home Library of the West End will hold an installation and dance at Parker Memorial Hall, Thanksgiving eve. The officers-elect are Jacob Litvin, president; Hyman Aranovitz, vice-president; Harry Rosenberg, secretary; Samuel Rosenberg, treasurer and Jack Leventhal, sergeant-at-arms. Other members are Louis A. Baker, Barnett Aranovitz, Walter Rotman, Maurice I. Barovitch, Myer Miller, Louis Altman, Samuel Goldman and Israel E. Brest.

IVERNIA BRINGS 1,244 PASSENGERS

The Cunard line Ivernia, arriving today from Liverpool, brought 406 second-cabin passengers, in addition to sixty-three first-cabin and 775 steerage. This is a record-breaking second-cabin list. The Ivernia's second-cabin accommodations was insufficient, so many of the passengers were given saloon staterooms, though they ate in the second-cabin dining room.

FIRE GUNS TO STOP HICCOUGHS

WAKEFIELD, Nov. 17.—Despite the employment of every known means to give her relief, the hiccoughs with which Miss Mabel Newhall, twenty years old, was afflicted a fortnight ago continue incessantly and the doctors are puzzled. Even the firing of guns at her bedside has failed to stop the hiccoughing.

Feared Consumption

Entirely Cured. Interesting Case.

W. H. Burtch, Bingham, Pa., writes: "I was in a terribly run-down condition, my lungs were weak and sore, and I had a dull, heavy pain between the shoulders. I lost flesh very rapidly, and feared I was going into consumption. After taking four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I was entirely cured and never felt better."

In cases where a strengthening, toning, appetite-giving medicine is needed, Hood's Sarsaparilla has effected thousands of cures.

FINE STYLISH CLOTHING

One thing about clothing of any kind bought of the S. H. Harrison Co., at 662 to 672 Washington Street, the style and finish are always the best. We sell clothing at a lower price than any other high grade store in Boston—but we never sacrifice quality, fit or style in doing so. We offer, to-day and to-morrow, the handsomest line of fine suits and overcoats to be found in the city—every color, every weave the famous Presto collars on the overcoats. We might say these suits or overcoats were made to sell at $20.00 to $25.00 and we would be telling the exact truth. But clothes sell lower at Harrison's big store at the corner of Washington and Beach Streets than anywhere else in New England, and these suits and overcoats are on sale now at the low price of

'NARROW GAUGE' HOLDS MEETING

Simultaneous with the publishing of the news that President Mellen of the New Haven road wishes to formally buy the "Narrow Gauge" railroad to Winthrop and Lynn, the stockholders of the little road—the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Company to be exact—held their annual meeting at Rowe's Wharf today. Nothing was said at the meeting of the proposed transfer of the control of the road.

Melvin O. Adams was reelected president and John A. Fenno was reelected treasurer and clerk.

The treasurer's report issued today showed that the actual rolling stock of the road and its ferryboats are worth $289,434.89. The value of stations, car houses, real estate, etc., was given, together with the $100,876.76 cash which the company has on hand, gives a total valuation of $2,354,151.26. The road has outstanding $850,000 worth of stock and an equal amount of bonds.

$67,270 Profit for Year.

The road made a profit of $67,270.84 during the past year, after paying $51,000 in dividends. It took in in passenger receipts $887,888.07.

Thirteen stockholders representing 6,623 shares, or a majority of the outstanding stock of the company, were present. President Melvin O. Adams was in the chair. The treasurer's report and that of the auditor were read and accepted.

The following board of directors was then elected: Melvin O. Adams of Boston, William S. Spaulding of Beverly, John A. Fenno of Newton, Karl Adams of Boston and Henry V. Cunningham of Boston. After this election the meeting was adjourned.

An expenditure of $17,000,000 along the North Shore is involved in the plans of the the Boston & Maine and New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads to take over the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad.

It is planned to extend the line to Beverly at a cost of $10,000,000 and to Gloucester at an expenditure of $7,000,000 more. The officials say the road can be completed in two years, the tracks reballasted, narrow gauge changed to standard tracks, new safety signal system installed, and the road electrified. The plan is to carry passengers through from New York to Bar Harbor. It also includes the abolishing of the present ferry line from Rowe's wharf to East Boston and the building of a tunnel from South Station to East Boston, via Atlantic avenue to Rowe's wharf, following the old ferry course.

Will Build Tunnel.

The action of President Mellen in filing a petition asking the Legislature for authority to purchase the Narrow Gauge is taken in banking circles as a public admission of the ownership of that road by the New Haven. Under the existing laws the Boston & Maine is not allowed to own the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn road, though it is claimed very nearly 75 per cent of the shares of the Narrow Gauge are owned by interests friendly to the Boston & Maine. A few years ago the Massachusetts Railroad Commission compelled the Boston & Maine officials to sell a large block of Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad shares which the Boston & Maine treasury was illegally holding. This action was brought about by Roscoe Walsworth, a Revere attorney, who is chairman of the Board of Selectmen of that town. The stock was sold to a Boston banker at private sale.

Say B. & M. Owns Control.

John H. Bickford, the engineer who was behind the proposed Boston & Eastern Electric Railway Company, says: "It's a move to throttle the Boston & Eastern Company, but we have no fear. Let Mellen keep his promises made when the Boston & Maine was taken over before he makes new ones."

Henry Howard, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee on public improvements, said: "The extension would be a great step toward public improvement. The control of the line by the Boston & Maine and the New Haven roads is an entirely different matter and one which at this time I cannot favor or oppose inasmuch as that feature will require far greater knowledge of the conditions than I am in possession of at this time."

Opposed to Merger.

Mayor James Rich of Lynn said: "It has been generally understood in Lynn that the Boston & Maine Railroad owned a controlling interest in the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad, and in my opinion the present move is simply one to take over a property legally that the road already owns.

"It is another link in the tightening of the grip of the Pennsylvania Railroad on the railroads of Massachusetts. The result is obvious. I don't know as to the sentiment of the general public in Lynn in regard to the matter. It is my personal opinion that the consolidation will tend to better service. I do not think, however, that it is for the best interests of the city of Boston."

YANKEES LOSE AT HORSE SHOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The Americans were out for revenge today against the Canadians, who nearly swept the boards last night in the important events in the national Horse Show at Madison Square Garden.

The program today was again international, two of the events being the army contest for the Canadian challenge cup and contest of officers riding two abreast over the course. Five nations participated.

Lieutenant Geoffrey Brooke of the Sixteenth Lancers of the English Army won the international jumping over the hurdles, the sensation [illegible]. His mount, over the hedge and water for a 22-foot leap. Oka, ridden by Lieutenant Mallarine of the French army, was second. Lieutenant Thornton of the English army was third and Uncle Sam's men had to be content with fourth place.

Clarence H. Mackay's handsome chestnut [illegible], Lynde Burns, bred by [illegible], beat Reginald Vanderbilt's [illegible] Little in the first class.

Lord Marlborough, from the Florham stud [illegible] the white ribbon and George H. [illegible] Cadham Gentleman won high commendation. Mr. Mackay, however, was [illegible] in the next exhibit, the contest for the [illegible] challenge cup open to winners of first and second prizes in classes [illegible] 11 and 12.

The cup must be won by the same horse two years in succession before it becomes the property of the exhibitor.

[illegible], shown by William White, trainer for Alfred [illegible] of the Willsden farm, [illegible], Pa., was given the blue ribbon for the best of the class.

FORBID SCHOOL GIRLS TO WEAR RATS IN HAIR

WATERBURY, Ct., Nov. 17.—There is rebellion among the pretty girls of the Crosby High School in this city because of an order issued by the school authorities forbidding them to wear rats, puffs or other auxiliaries to their natural crowns of glory. A mass meeting has been called, when the girls, who are backed by indignant parents, will try to find some way of defying the edict.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

COUNT WARNED NOT TO FLIRT

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—Count de Beaufort announces that he will sue [illegible] Kilgallen, his father-in-law, for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. This was after the Count had been [illegible] for three hours in his room at the Southern Hotel by a bailiff who served papers on the nobleman in two suits brought by dealers in books and clothing.

"I shall sue Mr. Kilgallen for alienating my wife's affections if she brings suit for divorce," he announced. Then, to show how his wife loved him, he produced a letter from her written to him in New York when he was agent for the Chicago Heights Terminal Railway last September:

Warned Against Flirting.

Buddy Dear: What on earth ails you and what are you doing and thinking that I don't hear a word from you? It never used to trouble me if I didn't get letters and telegrams from you regularly, because it never occurred to me to be jealous. I didn't think you would flirt with another woman for anything on earth. I expected you to go about and have a good time, and I did not care how many women you saw, because I felt perfectly sure of you.

I want to tell you that I have been thoroughly miserable. I did not think for an instant that you would flirt while I was away. Now, Jack, "cut it out." Either you want me or you don't. I know you want me, dearest. At least I know you love me, but for heaven's sake make up your mind what you are going to do. I am so nervous wondering and worrying what you are up to down there that I don't know what I am about. You must have gone through torture, if you were wondering in the same way about me, but, by heavens, you had no cause. I have not been flirting about as you have. Now I want to hear from you mighty quick, Jack.

Signs It "Pete."

I want you immediately to go and have a photograph finished up for me. I haven't a decent one. I want the large head that was taken and is nearly faded out—it is almost gone off the paper, so you won't have any trouble to know which one it is. Then I want also one in your morning coat and plaid trousers, with your top hat in your hand. I wanted to get them done while I was there, but didn't find the time.

Also, I would like to have one of Bob and me. Bob is on that high teakwood stand. I had my tailored suit and fur turban on. It was the only one taken of Bob in the first series, October, 1909, so it will be easily located, too. Don't forget this, dearest, will you? Especially the one of yourself. You can let the other one go if it is any trouble.

Well, dearest, this isn't a very nice "cheery letter," but forgive me. I don't feel "cheery." Please for the third or fourth time, I am asking you to send me a nice letter. Love to you, sweetheart. PETE.

The Count called up the hospital where his wife's broken bones are mending and pleaded with Dr. MacMartin to be allowed to see her. Evidently the answer was "No." Then he pleaded with Dr. MacMartin to tell him if the Countess spoke affectionately of him, and this, it seemed was agreed to.

"Ah, doctor, you transport me with happiness," exclaimed the Count.

RUN OF DRAG HOUNDS.

The Norfolk drag hounds, Henry G. Vaughan, M. F. H., meet today at the Riverside Farm, South Sherborn, with the bugles sounding at 3:40 p. m. On Saturday the hounds will be unleashed from White's Corner, Millis, with the lady and gentlemen hunters getting away at 3:15 p. m.

ELECTION OFF TILL NEW YEAR

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The trades people of Great Britain have whipped the politicians to a "frazzle."

It was stated officially today that the general elections will not be held until after January, upon urgent request of the tradesmen, who declared that the holding of elections in the holiday season would kill trade.

A deputation of royal warrant holders appointed by the tradesmen called upon King George and asked him not to allow the holding of the elections before Christmas. The request was made that the time set for the elections be postponed until some time in the new year. King George said he would back them up in their demands.

An official announcement of the exact time is expected simultaneously with the dissolution of Parliament.

MAN MAY BLEACH HAIR, SAYS JUDGE

WORCESTER, Nov. 17.—"If women bleach their hair, I don't see any reason why a man has not a right to do likewise,' said Judge Utley in District Court, when evidence was given that Fred Whittier, alias Fred Woodbury, charged with larceny, had used peroxide on his raven locks to disguise himself. Whittier's case was placed on file.

CONTEST WILL OF ATTLEBORO JEWELER

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 17.—A protest against allowing the will of Fred A. Newell, a jeweler of Attleboro, who left property valued at $2,000,000 was made in probate court today on the ground of undue influence. The widow is given the bulk of the estate under the will and a codicil involves many large public bequests.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION

Information of Importance to Everyone

A great deal of pain and suffering might be avoided if we had some knowledge of physiology and the care of the body, particularly those parts that do the most work and should always be kept strong and healthy.

In an interview with a prominent physician he states that people should pay more attention to their kidneys, as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poison and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the Winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than Nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, inability to hold urine, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention the Boston Daily American.

THE STORE OF NEW MERCHANDISE
GILCHRIST Co
Washington St.-Winter St.-Hamilton Place

"Friday Specials" are two words so firmly linked with the Gilchrist name that Boston shoppers have come to regard them as a sort of Gilchrist trade-mark. We introduced them to Boston many years ago. We made some bold claims when we inaugurated these "Friday Specials," but we've faithfully and consistently lived up to every one of them. We are justly proud of the wonderful patronage they have attained. From the very beginning they have been supreme in bargain importance. They hold a unique position in Boston merchandising.

Friday Specials From Our Great 2nd Floor Apparel Store

An entire floor given over to the selling of Apparel for Women and Children, where every-day prices are remarkable in the savings they involve. When the rigid rules are applied that govern the price-cutting for Friday's selling the savings are truly wonderful. Friday Specials at Gilchrist's must always be the most wanted and correct merchandise at unmatchable prices.

In B T Three Months Bright's Disease

Frank, Honest Statement of Thankfulness from a Man Who Was Cured of Bright's Disease, So That the Knoweldge of This Cure May Benefit Other Sufferers.

Russellville, Ohio, November 16, 1910—Special.—"I feel it my duty to write you, for what I say may be of benefit to other sufferers. I had what the doctors called Bright's disease. I was confined to my bed three months, my doctor coming to see me regularly, and finally called in one of the best doctors in the country. They both concluded I had to die. I then began taking Warner's Safe Cure, and after I had taken the second bottle I felt some better. I have now taken thirteen bottles, and am gaining in weight and feel greatly benefited, thanks to Warner's Safe Cure. I am 2 years of age. If you wish to publish this statement you have my consent to do so. Yours very truly, J. H. Williamson."

When your limbs are swollen, skin pale and tinged with yellow, puffiness under the eyes, and a dull aching in the small of the back; when an analysis shows albumen and casts, you are suffering from Bright's Disease and you should commence the use of Warner's Safe Cure. It will stem the ravages of chronic Bright's Disease and effect a cure where the kidneys are not absolutely ruined by prolonged degeneration.

It is made from the fresh juices of plants and medicinal roots, gathered at the proper season in the various quarters of the globe. Men skilled in botany and chemistry compound it. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes and sold by druggists everywhere.

In diseases of the kidneys, the bowels are usually constipated on account of the flow of bile being lessened. You should take Warner's Safe Pills, purely vegetable, absolutely free from injurious substances, a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. cents a box.

If you have never tried WARNER'S SAFE CURE send us your name and address. We will send you sample bottle, together with sample box of WARNER'S SAFE PILLS, free of charge. All we ask is that you mention the name of this paper when writing. WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, New York.

ENROLL IN BIG CONTEST TO-DAY

Now that the boys and girls of New England seem to realize that the first thing that is necessary in the contest, is to get your enrollment in the educational contest director has had his hands full receiving and properly recording enrollments which he has received in the last day or two.

Only ten pictures have been printed up to to-day, so that one can readily see that the contest is really not well under way yet. —The AMERICAN has a special prize offer which is being made to all boys and girls who have enrolled in this contest. As soon as your enrollment is received by this office the educational contest director will immediately send to you a letter which will tell you about the special prizes which are being offered to enrolled members only.

So, boys and girls, you had better get your enrollments in. If you have done this, look for the educational director's letter to tell you all about the special prizes offered to enrolled contestants.

Get your enrollments in to-day!

GIRL'S TEMPERATURE UP TO 116 DEGREES

MAYSVILLE, Ga., Nov. 17.—The temperature of Miss Etta Martin, a fever patient, is so high that the bulb of a thermometer graduated to 110 degrees, registered the highest figure on the graduated scale. Estimating the space above the figures left blank, it is believed the young woman's temperature is at least 116 degrees, the highest temperature on record that has not resulted fatally.

PRICE OF MEAT CONTINUES DOWN

25 Cents a Pound Is Asked for Roast Chicken as Compared to 28 Yesterday.

Slight reductions in lamb hindquarters, fresh pork, mutton forequarters and chicken were found by purchasers in Boston retail markets to-day.

Poultry prices ranged from twenty cents a pound for Western fowl up to as high as 33 cents for fresh-killed native chicken. Roast chicken selling for 28 cents yesterday was offered at 25 cents to-day.

A marketman, speaking of the downward tendency in poultry and other meats to-day said:

"Chicken is less because this is the [illegible] chicken season. The market has a big supply and is getting more every day.

"In regard to beef, lamb, pork and other meats, the rush for chicken and turkey is naturally causing a [illegible] trade in other meats. So prices of beef, lamb and so on have fallen off a bit. But when Thanksgiving is over and the public goes back to its regular demand for beef and lamb you will see the prices of these [illegible] stiffen."

No Cut at Restaurants.

It was reported that restaurants had cut prices, especially on meats. Some were said to have taken a nickel off the price of meat orders. This is not true. The restaurant [illegible] that as no general abatement has been made to them they can not afford to cut on meats when everything is so high. Furthermore, say the restaurant men, they did not put up prices before and should not be called on to reduce now.

Prices at Boston markets to-day were: Porterhouse steak, 28 cents; sirloin roast, 25 cents; rump, 35 cents; lamb hindquarters, 16 cents; lamb sides, 16 cents; lamb short chops, 25-30 cents; mutton loins, 16-23 cents; mutton forequarters, 8 cents; mutton short chops, 25 cents; veal steak, 28 cents; veal chops, 25 cents; whole hams, 16-18 cents; sliced hams, 25 cents; bacon, 25 cents; fresh pork, 18 cents; salt pork, 15 cents; leaf lard, 18 cents; butter, 38 cents; cheese, 20-25 cents; fresh eggs, 50-60 cents; fowl, 20-25 cents; roasting chickens, 20-25 cents; broilers, 22-28 cents; potatoes, 25 cents peck.

Dispatches from New York quote commission men as saying that further drops in food stuff prices may be expected soon. The reduction so far is the greatest in pork, five cents on the pound in some localities. The New York market for Thanksgiving and Christmas will be from five to nine cents cheaper on the pound than for a number of years.

High Prices in Chicago.

Chicago retailers are holding to their top prices. Dispatches from that city say that despite the announcements of the packers that the wholesale price of meats had gone down from 2 to 5 cents, the butchers did little for the consumer in the way of actual reductions. In fact prices quoted today were about the same as those of a week of [illegible] ago, when the top was said to have been reached.

Canvasses to ascertain whether prices had been reduced proved that they had not and to add to the consumer's burden the coal dealers announced that hard coal has gone up 25 cents a ton. Meanwhile the butchers are challenging the packers. They declare the packers are trying to "put one across" on the reduced cost of living.

They say:

"If we can be assured by the packers, not in newspaper interviews, but in black and white, that they will reduce the price of meats to a certain amount and keep them reduced for say three months, we will be glad to make corresponding reductions."

The national authorities are sceptical of any sincerity in the slight downward prices, as far as the food trusts are concerned.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson at Washington declares the reported decline in prices abnormal and unjustified by any economic conditions.

"I believe the droughts in the Southwest may be responsible in part," he says, "because the farmers are now rushing their cattle to market to save them. I do not see that there can be any continuance of the present movement."

Dr. Harvey Wiley, food expert of the same department, flatly declares that the entire reduction is only another devious scheme of the Beef Trust. "They can put up prices, and did put them up," says Dr. Wiley, "now they are putting them down. They are after somebody, some independent, and when it pleases them to

BROOKLINE LOSES BIG TAX AWARD

Although twenty-four cities of Massachusetts, including the city of Boston, profit financially, as the result of the change made by the last Legislature in the tax, the other nine cities and a large majority of the towns suffer losses ranging from a few dollars to $70,000, which represents the difference the new law has made to the town of Brookline.

HELD FOR DEATH AFTER FIGHT

George Craffey, thirty-four, of No. 108 Cedar street, Roxbury, is arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Robert Rome, fifty-two, of No. 38 Dudley street, Roxbury, who, according to the police, died as a result of injuries sustained during a fight at a meeting of Lathers' Union, No. 72, in a hall on the third floor of the Wells Memorial Building at No. 987 Washington street, [illegible].

Craffey was arrested at his home early to-day. The police allege that during the fight he struck Rome a blow on the jaw and the latter fell to the floor, striking his head. Rome died in the ambulance while being taken to the City Hospital.

A superficial examination made by surgeons revealed that death was due to a [illegible]

Rome's body is at the City Hospital morgue, where Medical Examiner Timothy Leary today performs an autopsy to determine the exact cause of death.

The circumstances leading up to the death of Rome are unexplained. While the police allege Rome fell to the floor as the result of a blow delivered by Craffey, some of the witnesses declare that Rome was pushed or fell from a bench, and that he struck his head while falling.

Craffey and Rome were both members of Lather's Union No. 72, of which Rome was ex-president, ex-financial secretary and ex-agent. An important meeting was called and the two men attended. The meeting had been going on about an hour and a half when a heated discussion arose over a subject pertaining to matters of vital interest to members of the union. Craffey and Rome, who are said to have had some words a short time previously in regard to a job, took opposite sides of the question. Their arguments conflicted and after a [illegible] debate it is said that the two men disregarded parliamentary rules and descended to personalities. One word led to another until finally the police say the two men came to blows.

The meeting was interrupted and other members of the union attempted to interfere when, the police allege, Craffey struck Rome on the jaw and he went crashing to the floor. Other witnesses say that Rome and Craffey were not the two who were engaged in the fist fight, but that two men got into a fight somewhat near where Rome was sitting and that he was pushed off the bench to the floor.

300 INDUSTRIAL TEACHERS MEET

Delegates are in Boston from all over New England and from New York and Pennsylvania. The Thursday session deals with the problems connected with trade education for girls. Three hundred delegates and others were present. Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education; Professor C. R. Richards, director of Cooper Union and president of the society, spoke. The principal addresses were "The Needle Trades," by Dr. Susan M. S. Edwards of the Chamber of Commerce.

The topic, "What the Schools Can Do to Train for These Trades," was discussed by Mrs. Lucinda W. Prince, director of the Union School of Salesmanship; Edith M. Howes, president of the Girl's Trade Educational League, and Helen R. Hildreth, acting superintendent of the Manhattan Trade School for Girls. Ralph Albertson of W. S. Butler & Co., Walter A. Hawkins of the Jordan Marsh Company and C. Lothrop Higgins told "What More the Schools Should Do to Meet the Demands."

Woolman of the Teacher's College of New York told of some "New Requirements Made by the Trade Schools." 35,000 "WHITE SLAVES" REPLACE VICTIMS WHO DIE

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—In an address in a synagogue here S. S. McClure said: "Before the month of November ends there will have been 35,000 pure, innocent girls beaten, drugged and sold into white slavery in the United States for prices ranging between $15 and $500 each. They will supplant that many white slaves out of the 300,000 now in the United States who have met their death.

A Congressman who was interested in the investigation ordered by the Government told me," said Colonel McClure, "that the discoveries made by the Federal authorities of conditions are so horrible that it would be best that the manuscripts that contain them be sunk in the sea. Only a partial report was issued."

GET THERE! IS SUFFRAGE CRY

Get up and get there!

Sounds like one of the "famous sayings of great generals," doesn't it? Or the war cry of a brave army? Certainly, that's just what it is.

Get-up-and-get-there is the new slogan of the women suffragists of America. It's the new watchword, echoes of which are still ringing in the headquarters of the Votes-For-Women organizations of the United States. It came after the women had shown their power in the recent elections. The leaders simply shouted, "Get up and get there," and all the women at once climbed in after the rallying cry.

The war cry was coined by Miss Alberta Hill, right hand-worker for Mrs. Blatch, president of the Equality League of Self-supporting Women. She said:

Must Fight to Win.

"The old way of being a suffragist was to go into a hall and talk to a lot of other suffragists. The new way is to go into the districts and talk to the voters.

"We can never get the vote if we depend on sentiment and abstract justice. The American people don't work reforms that way. We have got to prove to men that we can fight if they don't give us what we want—we must be just as practical as that.

"Next year we'll fight in every district where we have an enemy, as we did this Fall in the Twenty-fifth New York district. Our watchword for the future will be 'Get-up-and-get-there.'"

Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, secretary of the National Woman Suffrage Association, became enthusiastic when she was interviewed on the influence the women had in the recent elections. She said:

"Of course the result over which the national organization most rejoices is the adding of Washington the suffrage States. According to the returns we won by a vote of 2 to 1. It was the result of a most vigorous campaign by the women. They got other organizations interested in the work, such as the State Grange. They induced the editor of the Tacoma News, one of the most important daily papers in the State, to give over an entire edition to woman suffragists.

Best Argument Is "Work."

"The college girls formed a league and distributed a series of unique and brilliant posters, quoting Mark Twain, Lincoln and every possible authority in favor of the movement. Of course there were meetings in halls and on the streets and speeches without number.

"As in New York, the women served as watchers at the polls in the cities and did splendid work.

"Not the least effective argument, either, was the work of women who had already been appointed to public office.

As, for instance, Mrs. Blanche Mason of Seattle, an assistant labor commissioner for the United States government, and the organizer of a most effective department for women and children.

"But, though we didn't win, we also made wonderful campaigns in Oklahoma and South Dakota, where the suffrage amendments were pending. The Labor Federation in Oklahoma worked with the women and sent all over the State a poster reading: 'Men and women, you stand together in work and in hardships—stand together at the ballot box to protect your interests and your jobs.'"

Just Prejudice for Politics.

"In Illinois the woman made an automobile canvass of every county in the State, speaking directly for or against certain candidates on the issue of 'graft.' In Kentucky they made a vigorous campaign on educational issues, with endless chains of political propaganda. In Virginia and Maryland the suffragists did most active work in the political districts of the larger cities.

"More women have been running for office than ever before all over the country. Miss Antoinette D. Leach conducted a strong personal campaign in Indiana as a candidate for the Legislature. The Republicans, Democrats and Citizens' party each had three women candidates for the House of Representatives in Colorado. Women were nominated there for State superintendent of public schools and regent of the State University. Wisconsin elected a woman as county treasurer. Mrs. Mary Bennamy ran for the Legislature in Wyoming.

"The reason is that we have got out of prejudice and into politics.

"The fight ahead of us is both harder and easier. I said we were beyond prejudice, but that was the easiest thing in the world to fight. Now do you realize what is happening?

Dreaded by "Interests."

"We are becoming a power dreaded by the 'interests.' We have shown them this year as never before that we have power and that it will always be exerted against them. Not that we are better than men voters, but we are more definitely attacked in the stand of the trusts against our homes.

"And they will fight us by every weapon, fair or foul.

"That is why I say this election has made things harder for us. But it has also made them easier, because it has given us such an impetus that we could not stop if we wished."

Miss Harriet May Mills, president of the New York State Suffrage Association, claimed the women had elected Dix Governor of New York. She said:

"It was the women who carried the State for Dix. Not only the suffragists but even the antis did political work on this high cost of living question. And what we did here we repeated all over the country. It was the woman's landslide quite as much as the Democratic one. Personally I have never in my life known of an election where the women were so truly a power.

"Our most shining example of direct political work was probably in Buffalo and Erie county, where we conducted a campaign against Senator George A. Davis, for years the head of the judiciary committee, which would not submit our amendment to the Legislature. He went down to defeat.

ECLIPSE WAS IDEAL, SAYS PROF. PICKERING

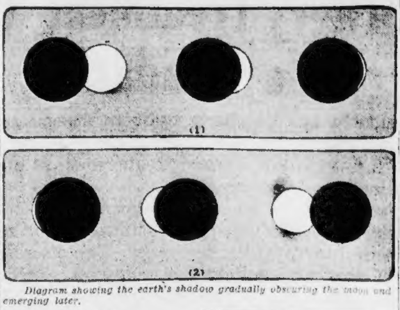

Diagram showing the earth's shadow gradually obscuring the moon and emerging later.

By PROF. E. C. PICKERING,
Director Harvard Observatory.

The eclipse of the moon last night was typical and very satisfactory from our point of view. During the early part there were passing clouds, but these cleared away, and our views were excellent.

Photographs were made with five different instruments. In three of the instruments the apertures were respectively 16, 11 and 8 inches. The other two were smaller.

At the request of the Pultowa Observatory in Russia the occultations of several stars by the moon were observed by Prof. Wendell with a 15-inch telescope, and by Mrs. Campbell with a 24-inch reflector.

The photographs secured were the best we have obtained in twenty years during which we have been photographing lunar eclipses, the first photograph having been made in 1888.

In the matter of the occultation of the stars the agreement of time with the predictions was very good. The results of this will help to determine more accurately the exact position and the exact diameter of the moon.

The movement for the observations such as we made last night was organized by the Pultowa Observatory. They did this before in 1891, which was the first time the system was employed.

Independent observations are taken, of course, but after this eclipse the Pultowa Observatory will collect observations from all over the world and compare the results.

By HAROLD JACOBY.
Famous Expert in Astronomy.

The writer and a body of students were at the Columbia observatory last night intending to view the eclipse through the telescope. Observations of a precise character were not planned, as these can be effected with much greater advantage with the powerful optical apparatus of the great observatories to which reference has been made.

Unfortunately the weather was unfavorable. A heavy blanket of clouds obscured the sky so completely that not even a glimpse of the eclipse was obtained.

Readers of the AMERICAN will be interested to know just what kind of information astronomers secure from observations of a lunar eclipse and the use to which such information can be put. We do not to-day expect results of as great present importance as astronomers used to expect fifty years ago or so.

Lunar eclipse observations consist simply in noting with a large telescope the exact instant of time, to the smallest possible fraction of a second, when the so-called "four contacts" take place between the eclipsing shadow of our earth and the bright disc of the moon. These four contacts are: The first slightest indentation of the moon's edge; the beginning of "totality" or complete obscuration; the end of totality, and the final complete termination of the eclipse at the moment when the last minute indentation of the disc disappears.

The exact times of these four events can be predicted by mathematical calculations based on our knowledge of the orbits of our earth and the moon. The agreement of prediction with observation then offers a most searching test as to the correctness of these orbits; and any discordance that may be brought to light by the observations gives an opportunity to correct our knowledge so as to render it more exact.

THE ECLIPSE SCHEDULE.

The penumbra appeared at	4.41 p. m.
First edge of shadow	5.44
Totality began	6.53
Middle of eclipse	7.21
Totality ended	7.47
Shadow ended	8.58
Penumbra ended	9.56
Magnitude (moon's diameter)	1.131
Diameter of earth's shadow	2.666

STEAMSHIPS IN COLLISION

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The French liner La Lorraine and the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm of the North German Lloyd line were in collision in the North River to-day while outward-bound. The bow of the Lorraine was smashed and she was compelled to return to her pier. The Prinz Wilhelm continued after a panic among her passengers had been quelled.

The German liner went only a mile down the bay, however, and then returned to her dock. An examination showed a large crack in the vessel's stern, and her captain decided to put back.

REUNITES COUSINS AFTER 25 YEARS

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 17.—A happy thought of Inspector John S. Tobin has resulted in the uniting of two cousins who did not know that the other was in this country. He ran across a small advertisement in which Miss Agnes L. McDonough sought information of Mrs. Annie Martin, nee Curry. Inspector Tobin, knowing a Mrs. Annie Martin in Newport, cut out the advertisement and sent it to her, and received word that Mrs. Martin was the one that was being sought. Mrs. Martin has since gone to New York to see her cousin, whom she had not seen for twenty-five years.

ONE ARRESTED IN GOTHAM TAXI STRIKE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Sympathizers with the taxicab strikers, undismayed by the fact that Mayor Gaynor yesterday ordered 1,100 policemen to check violence, beat up many working chauffeurs, frightened many men and women fares and did thousands of dollars worth of damage to machinery. The mobs invaded Fifth avenue and made the Plaza at Central Park South and Fifth avenue the scene of a sharp battle with the police. One man was arrested.

CLIFFORD NAMED AGAIN IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, Nov. 17.—At the Democratic caucus here Mayor William H. Clifford was renominated by an overwhelming majority over Daniel J. Harrington, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, by 872 to 125.

ANCIENTS BACK FROM ENGLAND

The committee from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, which went to England to present a certificate of honorary membership to His Majesty King George V., returned today on the Cunard liner Ivernia.

To quote Colonel Sidney M. Hedges, ex-commander of the Boston Ancients, the committee had a "glorious time," also a glass of port with His Majesty.

The committee, in addition to Colonel Hedges, included Captain John D. Nichols, present commander, and Lieutenant Francis H. Appleton. They were accompanied by Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Appleton. Lieutenant and Mrs. Appleton are remaining abroad indefinitely. The other four members of the original party came back today.

The moment Colonel Hedges was approached by the waterfront reporters on the deck of the Ivernia he burst out with:

"Oh, we had a glorious time. Of course, the festivities were marred somewhat by the death of Prince Francis of Teck, who departed this world on October 22. King George very graciously received us on October 27, the day after the funeral, at Marlborough House.

"We were presented to the King by Earl Denbigh. The King made us a very pleasing little speech, but, of course, under the circumstances our entertainment at Marlborough House was quiet, although we had a glass of port with His Majesty.

"We were royally entertained by Fitzroy Lodge of Free Masons, which is composed exclusively of members of the Honourable Artillery Company of London, of which Earl Denbigh is commander.

"We were also entertained by the officers' mess of the London Honourables and by Superintendent McKenzie of Epping Forest at the Forest Lodge."

CUDAHY MUST PAY BOSTON TAILORS

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—John Cudahy, Jr., or "Young Jack," as his friends distinguish him from his father, will have to settle a tailor's bill of $314, which he acquired in Boston five years ago while he was at Harvard, or take a chance of being haled into debtors' court. For a deputy bailiff armed with a writ of execution just issued is looking for "Young Jack." A judgment against Cudahy was given in favor of Dunne & Co., tailors, of Boston by Municipal Judge Fry. When asked finally to settle the bill Jack put his "O. K." on it and sent it to his father. But Cudahy, Sr., didn't "see it that way," and told a collector that Jack could take care of his own affairs.

FOSS'S BROTHER TO LIVE IN BROOKLINE

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Congressman Foss has rented his residence at No. 717 Gordon terrace. The lease, it is stated, was made three days before the November election. Mrs. Foss has gone to Brookline, Mass., where it was said the Congressman will take a residence near his brother, Eugene N. Foss, the Democratic Governor-Elect of Massachusetts. The Illinois Congressman, however, has retained his non-resident membership in the University Club.

ANTI-AMERICAN EDITORS EXILED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—As a result of the anti-American riot at Leon, General Estrada, the provisional President of Nicaragua, to-day expelled four newspaper editors, supporters of the late Madriz and Zelaya government, according to State Department advices from Consul Moffatt at Managua. Consul Moffatt states that these men owned or edited newspapers, which "have violated public decency," provoked disorder and been directly responsible for the anti-American riots.

CHAMPIONS AT TERRIER SHOW

The Boston Terrier Show opened today at Horticultural Hall for three days, and over three hundred of the best Bostons in the country were on the benches in the pink of condition.

Mrs. Frances P. Kendall of the Kill Kare Kennels of Lexington, Mrs. F. A. Dallen, Dr. Wallace Snow of the Dork Kennels, Frank Dondero of Brockton, Thomas Kelley of Jamaica Plain, W. M. Kinder, A. E. Wright of Southboro, S. R. Foster of Philadelphia, Mark A. Knipe of Haverhill, William O'Connor, Miss Alice Brownell of Providence, Mrs. John N. Champion of New Haven, the Auburn Kennels of Burlington, Vt., Agawam Kennels, Dr. C. F. Sullivan, and John C. Sullivan were among the largest exhibitors.

Competition Keen.

Prizes are offered for the best decorated benches and to-day found many of the aristocrats of dogdom surrounded by prettily arranged benching, electrically lighted and all the show ribbons of the year hanging about the side. To the old show dog all this glamor and show had but little effect and many of the dogs dozed as they waited for their turn to face the judge, Henry O. Riley of Philadelphia, and his assistant, Arthur Mulvey of Cohasset. To the youngster just breaking into the show game, it was far different and many were on their mettle tugging at their leashes with their owners or attendants trying to quiet them.

Today the junior and senior puppy classes will be judged and it will be well into the evening before this has been accomplished as the classes are large and the competition about as keen as in any show the club has ever held.

A large number of fanciers have come from the Middle States and the West for the show and a number of good Bostons developed in the West are picked as probable winners in several of the classes.

Mrs. Kendall, who shows Champion Yankee Doodle Pride, a double champion, finds sharp competition; for pitted against Pride are such good dogs as Jewel, Violet Girl and Trimount Countess. Mrs. Kendall also shows Pride and Yankee Doodle Rip for competition as a team and they have yet to face defeat.

Seven Champions.

At least seven champions are out for honors at this show—Revlio Peach, Auburn Happy, Yankee Doodle Did, Autocrat, Todd Boy, who comes on from Chicago to try and take a fall out of the local dogs; Yankee Doodle Pride and Dallen's Spider. Possibly to one of these goes the trophy for the best in the show or possibly some new comer out for first honors will sweep through the show to the biggest honor that can be handed out by the judge, "the best in the show."

Many innovations regarding benching, seating and in the show ring arrangements have been put into effect by the Boston Terrier Club. Over $400 in gold and plate is being competed for as well as the coveted blue, red, yellow and tri-colored ribbons.

To-night the Boston Terrier Club will hold its annual dinner at the Copley Square Hotel and this is always a feature of show week attended by many prominent in society.

NEWSBOY'S COURT READY

The newly organized Newsboys' court is to have its first sitting as a court on Friday night and interest throughout Greater Boston is being taken in the event. In fact, since the court is the first of its kind in the country, officials in all the large cities who have to deal with boys are watching the Boston newsboys with the idea in mind of establishing similar courts if the local court proves a success.

All the Greater Boston newsboys are keenly excited over the opening session, for each little fellow has taken a personal interest in the organization of the court and the election of judges to preside. Sixteen-year-old Harry [illegible] will occupy the place of honor at Friday night's session as chief justice. [illegible] is a pupil at the English High school. The associate justices are Louis Gray of the Wendell Phillips school and Jacob Rosen of the High School of Commerce.

With two men, Mitchell Freeman, superintendent of the West End House, and Alexander Peckham, secretary of the Boston Newsboys' Club, appointed by the school committee, the three young judges will have absolute power over the boys affiliated with the Boston School Newsboys' Association.

The tribunal will hold its sessions at No. 227 Tremont street. In all the court will have jurisdiction over 3,500 boys. There will be no appeal from its decisions.

That Neglected Cough

FEW coughs, no matter how trivial at the beginning, will pass off naturally. With neglect they become harsher, more irritating and frequently lead to complicating and fatal ills.

Statistics do not show the number of serious ills which began with that little trivial cough, but we venture to say that there are cases without number each winter where a little foresight would be the means of saving a great deal of sorrow later and much expense in doctor's bills.

We most earnestly recommend to your attention Jaynes' Balsam of Tar.

After our long experience in compounding remedies for the public we can state most emphatically that we know of no better, more effective or more simple remedy than our Balsam of Tar.

You may be sure that if we knew of a better remedy we should not hesitate to recommend it in preference, for our reputation is based on the effectiveness of the remedies we make and sell.

Fifty cents spent on a bottle of Balsam of Tar will prove to you the most judicious kind of an investment, the cheapest kind of insurance.

You should have a bottle in the home at all times.

And again—don't delay. Get it to-day.

SEIZE FIRM'S STOCK ON FRAUD CHARGES

NEW YORK, Nov. 17. — The entire stock of Joseph Brooke & Co., an English woolen firm, was seized by the government in action to recover $200,000 damages "in consequence of fraud and other wrongful acts." Alleged evasion of customs dues, disclosed by a former employe of the firm, is the basis for the action.

GIRL SAVES LITTLE BOY FROM DROWNING

WORCESTER, Nov. 17.—Ray Jencks, four years old, owes his life to the bravery of eleven year old Addie Pratt of Maiden road, who, when the baby had gone through the thin ice of a pond on the Ellsworth estate, waded in and pulled him out, then took him home and after rubbing his feet, put him to bed.

CUSTOMS MEN EXPECT RAISE

As a result of the present investigation of the customs service at Boston, all employees who are receiving salaries ranging from $840 to $1,200 a year are expecting increases. This is in line with the recent order of the comptroller of the treasury restoring local travelling expenses to all employees in the service except inspectors and treasury agents.

A New Treatment for Sick Headache

Sick headache is a peculiarly stubborn disease as the attacks continue to occur in most cases in spite of the most skillful medical treatment. It is a baffling disease to the medical profession, its cause not being accurately known.

Few diseases which do not threaten the life of the patient cause more suffering, more unhappiness in the family, more disturbance to the home life, than sick headache. The disorder is therefore worthy of the most careful study and attention. Many cases can be cured. Some may be incurable but these can be alleviated and the attacks made less frequent, an improvement well worth the effort.

Although the highest medical authorities admit that the cause and cure of sick headache is profoundly obscure there are certain well established facts which every patient should know.

Established Facts Concerning Sick Headache

A tendency to sick headache is generally hereditary and in a majority of cases the disease is transmitted through the mother. It frequently develops at an early age.

Although sometimes called "nervous headache" because of certain of its manifestations, sick headache seems to be due to some hidden defect in nutrition, some fault in the chemistry by which the stomach changes food into blood. This defective change produces a poison which the system throws off, with headache and nausea.

Most important, in the effort to find a cure, is the known fact that anything which tends to lower the "tone" of the body operates to bring on an attack and that when the system is "toned up" the attacks become less frequent or disappear altogether. Thus indiscretions of diet will produce an attack as will a sudden shock, grief or other mental disturbance. After a vacation spent in the open air, or when the general health is especially good, there is freedom from attack.

The Tonic Treatment

These facts led to the so-called tonic treatment for sick headache and for years Dr. Williams Pink Pills have been used with good results in numberless cases. This valuable remedy, however has no laxative action, and is useful in sick headache only between the attacks to build up the general health and make them less frequent.

As a rule a sufferer from sick headache can tell hours, sometimes days, in advance, when the headache is coming on. This fact makes it possible to use a laxative, as soon as the approach of an attack is discovered, to eliminate the poison from the system and prevent the attack or in a great measure to moderate its severity.

Laxative-Tonic Treatment the Best Known

A new laxative, PINKLETS, designed to be used in connection with Dr. Williams Pink Pills, affords a perfect combination treatment. These little laxative pills slightly stimulate the stomach and bowels and act on the liver. They are mild, sugar-coated, entirely vegetable, do not gripe and have no habit-creating tendency.

The treatment between the attacks and the preventive laxative treatment before an expected attack is all that can be done, as the stomach will not usually tolerate medicine during the paroxysm. Coal tar products, of which most headache powders are composed, are not only useless in curing sick headache but are dangerous as well and should be avoided.

Learn How to Treat Your Own Case

We have prepared a pamphlet that not only describes fully the Laxative-Tonic Treatment of Sick Headache and gives specific directions for the use of the remedies but contains also much valuable information regarding diet, exercise and the management of the sick-room during an attack. This pamphlet will be sent free on request together with a sample of PINKLETS, the little laxative pills. Write today if you want to treat your trouble intelligently. A postal card request will bring the pamphlet and the free sample. Address: The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

DALE'S IMPRESSIONS OF 'THE THUNDERBOLT'

By ALAN DALE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The most hackneyed of all bits of stage property, known as "the last will and testament," is the theme of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "episode in the history of an English provincial family," called "The Tunderbolt," which had its first American production at the New Theatre Saturday night. It was probably called "The Thunderbolt" because it doesn't thunder at all, and—produced at an ordinary "money-making" theatre—would soon bolt!

When playwrights have achieved great success, as Pinero has assuredly done, they pine for the sweet possibility of "writing to please themselves." That is to say, they pay no heed to the speculative manager, or to the self-seeking "star." Of course, it is lovely and a pious thing to "write to please oneself." Oddly enough, however, it doesn't always pan out. Popularity is awfully nice, and it covers a multitude of sins. Sir Arthur Pinero undoubtedly wrote "The Thunderbolt" in order to please himself, and—it will not bring grist to his mills—if I may be coarse enough to mention such a thing in connection with a playwright who desn't need grist.

It was well acted at the New Theatre—quite as well acted as when I saw it at the St. James Theatre in London—but it is a depressing study of a set of gloomy provincial people, and it is full of legal talk anent the aforesaid "last will and testament." It opened in a house of mourning, with the family of the deceased Mortimore waiting to hear the Reading of the Will—a favorite scene with novelists and dramatists.

"Dull Money Grubbers."

All the Mortimers were there, respectably garbed in black—James Mortimore, Ann Mortimore, Stephen Mortimore, Louisa Mortimore, Thaddeus Mortimore, Phyllis Mortimore, Rose, nee Mortimore, and her husband. They were all dull, provincial money grubbers, and—the thunderbolt fell. It was the appearance of an illegitimate child of the deceased, a young girl, who had apparently been left destitute. She had been her father's "pal," and she felt acutely—not the loss of the money (perish that thought!) but the fact that her father had apparently forgotten her.

Well, you know the possibilities of wills! These are unlimited. Pinero, "the master," doesn't disdain to make use of these possibilities in their cheapest and theatricalest form. There had been the "last will and testament." Phyllis, the wife of Thaddeus, had stolen it, and, seeing that it bequeathed all the deceased's cash to the illegitimate girl, she had torn it up and thrown the bits into the river. You guessed something of the sort when you saw Phyllis "made up melancholy."

Pinero, however, not being prophetic enough to "see" his play at the New Theatre, got busy with the conventional thing—forgetting, presumably, that he was really writing to please himself. And we were treated to the somewhat trashy spectacle of Thaddeus shouldering his wife's crime to save her from the results of a felony! This was the "big" scene, in which Thaddeus, badgered and cross-examined by lawyers, insists that he stole the will, and is finally cornered by the usual neglect of circumstantial details.

"Ends Most Gorgeously."

In the end everything ends most gorgeously—quite too gorgeously for the fastidious taste. The girl, as soon as she has been satisfied that illegitimate pa left her everything—which gratifies her peace of mind—refuses to accept the legacy, but insists that it shall be equally divided among the crowd. The penitent Phyllis—for the sake of the proprieties—gets her share settled on her children. Yet another share is given to a hospital. They each get about $150,000—which is certainly better than nothing at all. And, as the very first curtain falls, the lovely girl gives herself to a young clergyman, who is in the cast for no other reason than to make it end happily!

So you will see that "The Thunderbolt" is a funny mixture of gloomy and unprepossessing provincialism and quite cheap theatricalism. This mixture renders the piece unsatisfactory for an ordinary theatre. It did not "go" in London, so it got to the New Theatre as a curio. If it had been a success in London, it would, of course, have been "presented" here by Mr. Frohman. Probably he gave it to the New Theatre. "Beware of the Greeks bearing presents."

Even in "The Thunderbolt," however, the "art" of Pinero is apparent. There is the familiar "sledge hammer" force, which is illustrated even better by Mr. Manuel Klein in "The Gamblers." It is all very direct and straight. Pinero had a story to tell, and he knew how to tell it. The trouble is with the story, which is not fascinating. The only sign of life in the piece is the bickerings of the dull provincials. One of them even has a catch-phrase. "There are two sides to every story"—which sounds like Pinero gone wrong. The legal aspect of the will is so thoroughly threshed out that it makes you nervous and apprehensive. In his anxiety to be technically accurate, Pinero has gone into details that might have been left to the imagination.

"Better Than His Story."

Louis Calvert played the eldest Mortimore, and played it very well, indeed. He suggested the bluffness of "the man from Sheffield," which he always suggests, even when he is playing Falstaff, but he got a touch or two that told, and the character stood out. A. E. Anson played the star part (it must have been the star part, for George Alexander interpreted it in London) and was the self-sacrificing Thaddeus. Mr. Anson did exceedingly fine work and made a certain hit. Miss Olive Wyndham was the illegitimate girl, with a good deal of charm and refinement. The will-purloining lady was acted by Miss Thais Lawton, who was a trifle hard at times. Miss Helen Reimer was the "comedy" Mortimore quite effectively. Mrs. Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh and Miss Olive Oliver were other Mortimores, satisfactorily. The role of the avaricious brother-in-law was capitally rendered by Ferdinand Gottschalk. Others in the cast were Albert Bruning, Ben Johnson, E. M. Holland and Frank Gillmore.

In "The Thunderbolt" Pinero is better than his story. Such a play couldn't conceivably be popular—and popularity is no crime. It is a good thing to have handy in the house. It makes playwrights get tired of it, and the author of "The Gay Lord Quex" has, perhaps, had his fill of it. At the New Theatre, "The Thunderbolt" secured a good deal more, however, than it would have done elsewhere.

BANISH COMMON DRINKING CUP, IS PLEA IN NEW YORK

ALBANY, Nov. 17.—The State Department of Health is seeking the co-operation of the railroads operating in this State in abolishing the common drinking cup from the trains and railroad stations. The public cup, says the board, must be branded as a public nuisance and must give way under the weight of public opinion enforcing the conclusions of the sanitarian. And with the cup, it is added, ought to go the common towel, which at times may prove even more dangerous than the common cup.

ECONOMY RECORD PLANNED BY HOUSE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17.—Members who have arrived here for the Winter believe the house will make a record for economy this season. They base this statement on the understanding that there will be no rivers and harbors nor omnibus public building appropriation bills this season. The War Department will recommend appropriations for a number of important surveys, but the amount asked will be comparatively small. In matters of the public buildings bill it is understood the Treasury Department will confine its recommendations to buildings now under way and for the purchase of sites authorized.

HIGH PRICES HIT TUFTS FACULTY

A serious falling off in the number of students in the theological department of Tufts College and the necessity of a general increase in the salaries of the teaching staff are the features of the annual report of President Hamilton. He also takes exception to the criticism of the trustees of the Carnegie foundation that the entrance requirements at Tufts are not properly enforced.

President Hamilton deplores the falling off in the number of students in the theological school from fifteen last year to ten and says it gives cause for serious alarm regarding the future of the Universalist church.

Not only the increased cost of living but the desirability of maintaining the high standing of the faculty are the reasons advanced for more pay for the professors. The president says that only by private arrangements giving professors plenty of time for outside work, thus enabling them to earn additional income, has it been possible for Tufts to retain the services of its most valuable men. He speaks of the opening of Jackson College for women as most gratifying and as fully justifying the ending of the co-educational plan at Tufts.

MAN IN SKIRTS ROBS WOMAN

Masquerading in woman's clothes, a thief attacked Mrs. Irving W. McAllister of No. 209 Huntington avenue, near the corner of St. Paul and Norway streets and stole her hand bag containing $60. The thief was dressed in a black coat and skirt, and wore a black hat, over which a veil was draped. He carried himself well and made a good "woman." He was about five feet ten inches tall.

DAZZLING PARADE OF FASHIONS AT OPERA

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Society showed itself more anxious to be on time for the opera last night than to linger over their dinners, and, strange to say, the majority of the ultras were in their seats when the curtain rose and for once the lobby lacked the usual subdued gayety of late arrivals. It was equally as brilliant a night socially as the opening night. Everybody was there, the jewels were as magnificent, the gowns as handsome and the whole scene quite as typical of Wonderland.

Never has there been a season of such gorgeous colorings and daring color combinations, a situation brought about in part by the extreme severity of outline characteristic of Winter fashions. Never has such a carnival of colors reigned, liberal, dominant, brilliant, yet somehow not aggressive. There is the general mixing of rainbows and sunsets and the stealing from every object in nature its most brilliant hues. So no wonder the opera parade seems unusually dazzling and each gown a gem the rarest art can produce, when the crimson upholstered boxes blossom forth like so many hanging flower baskets with the crowned heads of society in their gala costume.

That pretty little bud, Miss Elise Ames, made a very charming picture last night while receiving in her mother's box. She was graciousness itself and interested herself in each caller with the graciousness and tact for which she is already noted. She wore a particularly becoming gown of sea shell pink satin, the corsage outlined in mesh of silver, studded with pearls. Her handsome mother, Mrs. Oliver Ames, wore a vastly becoming gown of white satin with phalange of knitted white lace over black and edged with black velvet.

Miss Eleanor Patten was a centre of interest as she strolled through the foyer, her tall svelt figure and pretty blonde coloring being shown to the best possible advantage by her strikingly lovely gown of pale blue satin, trimmed with silver spangled net and the French touch of color furnished by the knot of orchids on the corsage.

Countess Moltke, the golden haired lady with a face that is perfect in contour and color, who often is pronounced the handsomest young matron in Boston and Washington society, came with her sister, Mrs. William Patten, and lingered some time in the corridor greeting Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott and her group of guests. The Countess was lovlier than ever in palest pink chiffon and white lace and a riviere of diamonds, while Mrs. Patten, who is equally tall and equally queenly in stature, though not quite so handsome, was in deep rose satin, embroidered in silver.

Mrs. Shaw in Grecian Gown.

Mrs. Louis Agassiz Shaw (Joan Bird) who made her first appearance at the opera this season was classic and bewitchingly lovely in her Grecian-like gown of black chiffon combined with torquois satin and that other attractive young matron, Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott was in palest blue chiffon. She had among her guests her sister, Mrs. Robert Saltonstall who was in [illegible] lace combined with pale blue satin. Mrs. Alexander Porter, Jr., who usually wears rich satins, vivid in color, and perfect in style, was a notable figure last night in a Paris gown of emerald green satin.

Miss Helen Sears, fresh from Europe, making her first appearance at the opera last night, wore an exquisite creation of gold tissue moire bordered with sable and a Frenchy girdle of deep chanticler satin.

One always sees the gentle, quietly gowned Mrs. Charles Bird where music is, and last night she looked more stately than ever in a simple, though beautifully fashioned gown of black velvet.

Miss Miriam Shaw, who has Miss Elizabeth Porter as her guest, wore a simple, pale pink chiffon frock and no jewels.

Mrs. George Fearing's blonde loveliness was accentuated by her filmy gown of white lace and pale rose chiffon.

Miss Ruth Flint, the dainty beauty of the season, wore a becoming frock of [illegible] chiffon bordered with sable.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

History is being made at the Boston Opera House these days. Last evening occurred the first performance in America of a one act opera by one of the greatest living composers—"L'Enfant Prodigue," of Claude Debussy.

If that wasn't enough to satisfy those who delight in novelties there were several points on the schedule, and a performance of "I Pagliacci" to round out the evening.

Carlo Galeffi, an Italian baritone, was introduced in "Pagliacci." Mlle. Fely Dereyne appeared for the first time this year, and Ramon Blanchart, the Spanish baritone, sang his first performance of the season.

Claude Debussy, who composed "L'Enfant Prodigue," is one of the leaders in modern French music. His style is distinctive and original. He seeks to make music dramatic, but is no mere imitator of Wagner, although he has composed music for "Tristan und Isolde." He delights in strange harmonies, in queer effects, and he can perform wonderful feats with a grand orchestra. Richard Strauss, composer of "Elektra" and "Salome" and the wizard of modern orchestration, is a man of great noises, brazen sounds and nauseating [illegible]. Debussy's effects are secured by tranquility, weird chords and pale harmonies. "Pelleas et Melisande," which he composed some years ago, has won recognition as a wonderful music drama.

But the Debussy of "Pelleas" is the middle aged composer of today. The author of "L'Enfant Prodigue" was a young chap of twenty-two. He submitted it in competition with many others for the Prix de Rome, the greatest honor which could be achieved by a pupil of the Paris Conservatory, and won the prize.

Debussy may have had the same ideas on composition which have won the respect of the world today, but he knew better than to flaunt them in the faces of the teachers of a quarter of a century ago. "Pelleas et Melisande" would have found its way to the coal bin if submitted to the scholars of those days.

Like a sensible fellow he composed what he thought would please. The little work was in cantata form and was afterwards arranged for the stage. It has been revived and brought to America because of the increasing fame of Debussy and the demand of opera goers for novelties.

The Boston Opera staged it beautifully. It was set in a tropic garden by the brink of an azure lake with a white terraced city in the background.

The story is simple and familiar, the parable of the prodigal son. There is little action and the characters are stiff and unreal. No amount of arranging could overthrow the atmosphere of the concert cantata. But there is much fine music of a positive and charming character. The modern Debussy, who shuns melody and who abhors the lyric line, was not born in those days, although there is much in the orchestration, unusual harmonic effects, familiar instruments used strangely, to show the inventive genius of the young man.

The opera ballet danced prettily to dainty ballet music of an Oriental flavor. The duet between mother and son is pleasing to the ear and the final chorus massive and church-like, but superb. The chorus suggests the influence of Gounod.

Miss Nielsen as "Lia."

There was little opportunity for acting, but Alice Nielsen as Lia, the mother, made the most of her opportunities and sang most artistically, although one wondered if a dramatic soprano would not be better in this role. Robert Lassalle sang sweetly and earnestly. He does not yet understand the value of restraint and climaxes, but his voice is capable of wonderful things. Ramon Blanchart was imposing in appearance, but sang a trifle unsteadily.

In "I Pagliacci," Constantino appeared as Canio, the proprietor of the little troupe of strolling players. He sang as if he loved the part, and produced big, broad tones in true dramatic fashion. His singing of the great aria at the end of the first act was thrilling and the rich notes throbbed with the poignant misery of the poor mummer.

Nedda is not a great part, but it is greater than many of the sopranos who essay it. Ordinarily Mlle. Dereyne should have no difficulty with it, but last night she sang lifelessly and somewhat uncertainly, as if she were suffering from a cold.

Carlo Galeffi, the baritone, comes from Rome. He is a big man and an excellent actor. His voice is sonorous and flexible and he uses it tellingly. He was called before the curtain half a dozen times because he sang the prologue most dramatically.

Fornari was excellent as Silvio. Moranzoni led "I Pagliacci" in his customary fiery spirited manner, while M. Caplet's reading of the Debussy score was scholarly and convincing. The chorus singing was one of the most enjoyable features of the evening.

BROCKTON, Nov. 17.—When Charles F. Raymond, aged thirty-seven, of No. 16 Perkins place was detected in the act of confiscating a jar of pickles and some jam at the Brockton public market, he broke down and admitted that he took them for his sick wife.

HELEN TAFT "PEACEMAKER"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Helen Taft, peacemaker, is the title the President's daughter has won by her tact and independence in choosing her friends among the younger set. Last year six debutantes, daughters of influential and wealthy parents, called themselves the "Big Six" and gave entertainments just among themselves, leaving out the girls of the diplomatic set. Later in the season the "Big Six" allowed a few more girls to enter their circle.

When it was announced that Miss Taft would make her debut this year instead of returning to college, many of the younger set as well as all the members of "Big Six," who were in Washington, eagerly sought her as their guest of honor at teas and luncheons. Miss Taft decided to accept the invitations of her schoolmate, Miss Ruth Pilling, and that of Mrs. Wickersham, wife of the attorney general. Miss Pilling invited the debutantes of this year to meet the president's daughter, while Mrs. Wickersham invited all the most intimate friends of Miss Taft without regard to any cliques. So Helen Taft is loyal to her friends and will invite [illegible] girls and her old school friends, avoiding any ill feeling.

URGES X-RAY TEST FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

The use of the X-ray, as an adjunct to school in early life to determine the fitness of a child for mental stress involved in educational work, was favored by Dr. Thomas Morgan Rotch of Harvard, speaking at a meeting of the Eastern Kindergarten Association in Mt. Vernon Church Hall. His subject was "The Grading of the Child, According to Development, by Means of the Roentgen Ray." He argued that the skeleton represented a frame work of development on which the body was built and this development, when determined, would present the best source for evolving a practical index.

Similarly in sports and in regard to child labor, the doctor held that the fitness of the child to engage in either the labor or the sport could be determined accurately.

WIFE DIES WHO SLEW HUSBAND FOR LOVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Mrs. Anna Burgtorf, who killed her husband, Dr. Theodore R. Burgtorf, and then turned the revolver upon herself, died of her wounds. She would not be operated on and would have refused a physician if it had been permitted. For years the woman had suffered from a painful facial disease. "I may have been selfish," she said, "but I loved him so I couldn't bear to go without him."

3,500-MILE RACE WITH DEATH IS LOST

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 17.—Commander L. Calvin Bertolette, U. S. N., took a 3,500-mile race with death across the continent today. He was hurrying from Bremerton, Washington, where he is stationed, to the bedside of his father, Levi Bertolette. The son arrived to-day, four hours after his father died. Commander Bertolette was on a cruise around the world with the battleship fleet when his mother died.

N. H. MAJORITY IN HOUSE 37

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 17.—Final returns from all the towns show that the Democrats make even greater gains in the State Legislature than was first thought. In the last Legislature the Republicans had a majority of 172 in joint ballot. In the House the Republicans will have a majority of only 37. In the Senate they will control by only seven votes. This gives them a majority of only 44 in joint ballot. The two bodies will contain approximately 420 members. A contest has already arisen among the Republicans for the speakership. Rosecrans W. Pillsbury, who has sought the office twice before, is a candidate. He is allied with the Bass wing. Alvin F. Wentworth of Plymouth, a new member, is asking support for the office. Colonel Rufus N. Elwell of Exeter, Speaker in 1905, is mentioned.

John Pender of Portsmouth is candidate for President of the Senate, and William D. Swart of Nashua is said to be thinking of it, too.

ARMY MAN AND RICH WIFE SEPARATED

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A society sensation was caused to-day by the announcement that Captain J. Pierre Drouillard, formerly of the United States army, has separated from his wife, who was Miss Ada Sorg, daughter of the late millionaire, Paul A. Sorg, Congressman from Ohio. During the five years the Drouillards have lived in this city they entertained lavishly. They are well known in social circles in London and Paris. A member of the Sorg family stated that the separation is amicable and is caused by incompatibility. Captain Drouillard comes from an old Southern family. He served in the Spanish War, both in Cuba and the Philippines. His sister, who was considered one of the most beautiful women in the South, married Comte de Montpres.

PARALYTIC SHOCK SUNDERS A FAMILY

Mrs. Betty Thornton, coming here from England with her two daughters to join her husband in New Bedford, was stricken with paralysis during the voyage, which fact may prevent her landing in this country. The mother, helpless now from the paralytic shock, and attended by her anxious daughters, arrived to-day on the Ivernia from Liverpool. The husband was at the dock to meet them. When he found that his wife was not only an invalid, but may not be able to come to the home he has prepared for her in New Bedford, he was heart-broken. Mrs. Thornton is forty-seven years old. She may recover in part from the paralytic shock. In that case or in case the husband can give bonds that she will not become a charge upon this country, she may be permitted to land.

COOK OVERBOARD, CHASED BY CREW

The thirty members of the crew of the British steamship St. Patrick mutinied while crossing the Red Sea against Hi Lo, the Chinese cook, whom they picked up at Hong Kong. The crew stood Hi Lo's cooking as long as they could, then they decided to give him a beating. The terrified Chinaman jumped overboard rather than take a chance with the crew but was rescued from drowning after he had been in the water sixteen minutes.

WHAT DOES PRESIDENT LOWELL MEAN BY HIS SAYING "DEAD SURE"?

At the Harvard Union last evening President Lowell congratulated the football team on the prospects for Saturday's game. He said:

"You seem to have a dead sure thing, this year; yes, a dead sure thing! At least, that is what I hear from New Haven."

And to-day everybody in Cambridge is asking what is "A dead sure thing"? What sort of English is that to come from the lips of a university man? Where is the Society for the Prevention of Slang?

MAVERICK MILL IS OPENED UP

Governor-elect Foss has made good on another prediction. Several months ago he asserted that the new Maverick Cotton Mills in the Noddle Island district of East Boston, would be in operation on or before January 1, 1911. The mills were opened yesterday. Mr. Foss is the chief stockholder in the enterprise.

Only one of the groups of buildings planned is, however, completed. This is 901 by 150 feet and two stories in height. It is built of re-inforced concrete and is a model in sanitary and fireproof mill construction. As it now stands it is only half as high as when completed, for two additional stories are to be put on it, and this work is already begun.

The mill completed will give employment to 1,200 hands and when the entire group is finished there will be required over 5,000 employes.

GIRLS ARRAIGNED ON BURGLARY CHARGE

QUINCY, Nov. 17.—The two prettiest girls ever arraigned before Judge Avery in court here on a burglary charge are Mabel Johnson, sixteen years old, and Marion Beck, who is two years her senior. They live in Milton and the police of that town say they broke into the homes of E. C. Eustis and Mrs. Jeffries on the famous Eustis estate last Summer and stole from the latter goods valued at $177.37, which belonged to F. A. Eustis, and articles valued at $200 from the former. Among the goods they are accused of taking from F. A. Eustis, who lived in the Jeffries home, is a coonskin coat. It is also charged they made away with wines or liquors appraised at $14.87.

The court hearing lasted four hours and finally Judge Avery placed Miss Johnson in the custody of a probation officer and held Miss Beck in $300 for a continuance of the hearing on Tuesday next.

POLICEMAN MARRIES L. P. MORTON'S NIECE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 17.—Charles G. Lehnhausen of the police force and Mrs. Charlotte Reppert were married today. The romance began only a few months ago. Mrs. Reppert is a niece of former Vice-President Levi P. Morton. She is well known as a magazine and special story writer. Lehnhausen has been a member of the police department since 1895 and was made captain recently.

U. S. BACKS UP JUDGE LANDIS

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The fate of the beef trust is declared by the government attorneys to rest on the outcome of today's argument before Judge Landis on the indicted packers' motion to have their trial transferred from Landis's tribunal to the U. S. Circuit Court.

With a general defence of Judge Landis, the federal government filed its formal answer to the motion. The attorneys for Louis F. Swift, Edward F. Swift, Charles H. Swift, Francis A. Fowler, Edward Tilden, J. Ogden Armour, Arthur Meeker, Thomas J. Connors, Edward Morris and Louis H. Heyman, who are charged with having violated the Sherman anti-trust law, insist that Judge Landis's participation in the government's investigation of an alleged beef monopoly in 1905 compels the transfer of the present trial.

In its reply the government declares that Judge Landis's participation in that investigation had nothing to do with any of the charges now made against the defendants, or with any violations of the Sherman law, but dealt "almost entirely" with charges of acceptances of rebates, and that no prosecutions of any kind ever resulted from that investigation.

HEIRESS BORN TO WEBB MILLIONS

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—For eleven days Chicago has been the home of one of the richest heiresses in the United States. It has just become known that the hurried visit to Chicago of Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, widow of the "Sugar King," and Mrs. W. Seward Webb of New York, was not to nurse their daughter and daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Watson Webb, back to health from an attack of pneumonia, as announced, but to be present at the presentation to the world of an heiress to the Webb-Vanderbilt-Havemeyer millions. At a little home at No. 155 East Division street the heiress made her debut in the world while Chicago society thought Mrs. Webb was seriously ill with pneumonia.

ARREST GIANT HOTEL CLERK AS THIEF

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Sherman K. Hill, twenty-six years old, and six feet six inches tall, was arrested when he alighted from a train here on a charge of robbing the Atlantic Hotel of Bridgeport and one of its guests of $1,000. With him was a young and pretty woman, who said she was Mrs. Cora Dayton of Stratford. Mrs. Dayton, who is an accomplished musician, carried a violin. This and Hill's abnormal height made detection of the pair easy.

Those statutes were never re-enacted in this country but were considered as incorporated into the common law. Some few other statutes passed since the emigration, were adopted by our courts, and now have the authority of law derived from long practice. So much, therefore of the common law of England as our ancestors brought with them and of the statutes then in force amending or altering it and the ancient usages aforesaid may be considered as forming the body of the common law of Massachusetts which has been [illegible] to some alterations by the acts of the provincial and State legislatures and by the provisions of our constitution."

If there was no statutes giving the Superior Court of Massachusetts the same jurisdiction as that possessed by the Court of Kings Bench of England it would seem clear under the decision in Commonwealth vs. Knowlton, just cited, approved by Sackett vs. Sackett that the common law power to change the venue of a criminal trial which was inherent in the English courts prior to 1700 and which has been recognized in an unbroken line of decisions in England and Ireland since that time was one inherent in the two highest Massachusetts courts.

"The existence of a power in the Superior Court to change the place of trial in order to have an impartial trial for a person accused of crime seems so necessary to the maintenance of justice that unless the right has been expressly taken away from the courts by statute it must still be inherent in them.

New Hampshire Case Cited.

"We find, however, that by statute the powers of the English courts of King's Bench, Exchequer and Common Pleas have been expressly vested in the Supreme Judicial Court and the Superior Court.

COLD IS HERE; IS THE HEAT ON?

"Good morning, Janitor, have you used the furnace yet?"

That's the popular howl in Greater Boston today. For it's cold and snappy here abouts. Winter is here. No matter how hot a tenant's anger is, it isn't the right kind of heat.

The landlord is a busy man. He is trying so the tenants say, to evade his responsibilities, also to evade the tenant.

The janitor is bus[illegible]. He hears cries like this:

First Floor: "O, Janitor, more heat."

Second Floor: "Hey! Janitor, anything doing in the heats? My feet is frozen."

Third Floor: "O, Janitor. Wants, [illegible] came [illegible] please tickle the furnace."

And as much more of the same kind as there are floors.

Then tenants want their heat differently. While fifteen tenants are howling for more warmth, the sixteenth, a fresh-air fiend comes rampaging down into the basement to know why he is being baked to death.

"Aw, what's the use," says the [illegible] to himself, "I guess I'll enlist in the Navy."

BOYS GET A HOME.

Louis Grior, fourteen, and Frank Grior, ten, sons of Frank Grior of Newton, were today turned over to the State Board of Charities by Judge Kennedy in the Newton Court. They were found by Patrolman [illegible] Good sleeping under the steps of the house No. 17 Derby street, that city. Their father is an Italian laborer.

MANY IN FIELD AGAINST LODGE

The fight for the seat [illegible] occupied by Senator Henry Cabot [illegible] is on in earnest. There [illegible] avowed Democratic candidates [illegible] for the place. They [illegible] Hon. William A. Gaston [illegible] man Joseph F. O'Connell.

Other Democrats [illegible] mentioned in connection [illegible] Charles S. Hamlin, Mayor [illegible] gerald and Louis D. Brandeis [illegible] of Charles W. Eliot [illegible] Harvard, sometimes classed [illegible] and sometimes as a R[illegible] been mentioned.

The fact that there are [illegible] cratic candidates already [illegible] the foregoing [illegible] develop as the fight [illegible] one thing that no Democrat [illegible] vote for a Republican [illegible] son that they will [illegible] Democrats to vote for and they [illegible] excuse for it.

Ames is Very Active.

On the other [illegible] getting in real [illegible] on Lodge [illegible] Congressman Butler Ames [illegible] of Boston [illegible] Congressman Samuel W. McCall [illegible] Congressman John W. Weeks are said to be in a receptive condition [illegible] of others who will [illegible] eager for the scuttle [illegible] as the final manoeuvres [illegible] not [illegible] returned.

As things stand [illegible] though Lodge is doomed. The [illegible] need only thirteen Republican votes to defeat him. Careful canvass [illegible] members of the legislature [illegible] that there are fourteen Republicans who have said that they will not vote for Lodge. That would [illegible] the matter.

Friends of Lodge are trying to keep Republican candidates out of the field, realizing that the more Republican candidates there are, the more reason some of the Republicans will have to vote for other candidates than Lodge. Besides the fact that there will be [illegible] plenty from their own party to vote for, it is not likely that any Democrats would vote for Lodge in the face of what Governor-elect Foss [illegible] last election.

"Retire Lodge," Urges Foss.

"The [illegible] the duty of the voters of Massachusetts [illegible] Mr. Lodge [illegible] Senate [illegible] private [illegible] part of the Commonwealth."

Governor-elect Foss said [illegible] interview published [illegible] Sunday [illegible] of October 23.

"We have [illegible] one of the most remarkable clauses ever inserted in a party platform. I believe it is without precedent in this State or country. It reads: 'We [illegible] Senator [illegible] Representatives [illegible] Senator [illegible]

FELLED TO STREET BY STRANGE MAN

The police are looking for an [illegible] fied man whom they allege [illegible] Andrew Hughes, fifty years old [illegible] Ashley street, Jamaica Plain, [illegible] Dover and Washington streets [illegible] Hughes is in the City Hospital with [illegible] fractured nose and fractured skull [illegible] lieved he will not recover. He [illegible] the police that he was [illegible] ington street when a stranger [illegible] behind, tripped him up and threw him to the ground.

STRONG COUNT IN INDICTMENT AGAINST U. S. SENATOR LODGE

"When one looks over Mr. Lodge's list of committees, [illegible] prominence in [illegible] that Massachusetts [illegible] think twice before [illegible] practically [illegible] power which the senior Senator [illegible]. He has got this [illegible] naturally, and by [illegible] of service."

The above is from an [illegible] Herald. And this is one of the strongest counts in the [illegible] Lodge. He has POWER [illegible] all of the committees of which [illegible]. And that POWER has [illegible] ways 24 hours a day 365 days [illegible] used against THE INTERESTS OF THE PEOPLE [illegible] own glory and the moneyed [illegible] Lodge has always been in FAVOR of doing [illegible] for the [illegible] AGAINST doing anything [illegible] people of Massachusetts.

For [illegible] years he has MISREPRESENTED the people of this great Commonwealth. [illegible] will of the people.

Turn him out and keep him out of the Senate [illegible] Massachusetts [illegible] represented by a man who [illegible] the MONEY TRUST.

He said emphatically that the United States would brook no interference with Panama affairs.

THATCHER TO CONTEST SEAT

BROCKTON, Nov. 17.—On the grounds that election in the Fourteenth Congressional district was irregular and was illegally carried on in some places, Thomas C. Thatcher, Democratic candidate, defeated by Judge Robert O. Harris, will appeal to Congress for recognition as the representative from the Fourteenth district.

Thatcher declares that the election carried on in Hanson was illegal, in that a Mr. Bowker, selectman of the town, acted as one of the tellers. According to Attorney Jennings of Boston, counsel for Thatcher, this is illegal.

In this town Harris received 133 votes and Thatcher 48. In the recount, being held in this district, Thatcher has gained 66 votes in 24 towns and one city, cutting Harris's majority of 158 to 92. If the vote in Hanson is thrown out Thatcher will have a majority of thirteen votes, with twenty towns and one city to be heard from.

Another contention of Thatcher is that he saw sixteen ballots in Taunton yesterday, in which the voter had evidently shown his intent to vote for him. The marks were underneath Thatcher's name and not at the right side as prescribed. The registrars refused to count these ballots for Thatcher.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Hester: You say you are taking on flesh at a rate that dismays you and will faithfully follow my advice if I tell you how to secure stylish slenderness. I am glad to say you will not find my directions difficult to follow, for I do not believe in starving or violent exercise to cure obesity. Just get four ounces of parnotis from your druggist, dissolve in 1½ pints hot water, and take a tablespoonful of this harmless fat dissolvent before each meal. Weigh yourself at the end of each week for four weeks and you will be delighted with the result. You will be lighter in spirit as well as body, for parnotis benefits the general health.

Mrs. R.: To allay and soothe the irritation and roughness of your complexion caused by hard water, sun or winds apply a lotion made as follows: Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in a half pint of hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Apply with the palm of the hand and gently rub until dry. Use this inexpensive and excellent face wash daily instead of powder or cosmetic. Spurmax preserves the skin and beautifies the complexion, making it soft, smooth and white.

M. S.: I do not think brunettes are afflicted with superfluous hairs on the face any more than are blondes. Of course, black or dark hairs are more noticeable. You can easily get rid of them if you will use delatone. Make a paste by mixing a little of the powder with a little water, cover the skin from which you wish to remove the disfiguring hairs, let remain two or three minutes, then wipe off the paste and wash the skin thoroughly with warm water. This one is pretty expensive. Druggists [illegible] one dollar an ounce, but it is worth it. If the hairs should return they will be thin and almost colorless and another application of delatone will permanently rid you of them.

Caroline: To secure well-rounded curves you must assimilate the food you eat; have good digestion and good circulation. I would advise you to try eggolene compound tablets, for they will help not only your thin neck, shoulders and bust, but will make your whole figure full and plump. Ova testa and lecithin are the most reliable flesh builders known. They are derived from eggs and form the principal ingredients in eggolene compound tablets. You can buy the tablets from your druggist at a dollar per box, a rough two weeks' treatment. In ordinary cases, thin persons gain from ten to twenty-five pounds in thirty days.

W. I. G.: Especially at this season of the year you should be feeling energetic, full of life and have a good appetite. Even though you do not feel really sick, you should take a good tonic to rid your blood of its impurities and build up your health and strength generally. Get an ounce of [illegible] from any drug store and dissolve it [illegible] half a cup of sugar in a half [illegible] alcohol, then add enough hot water [illegible] full quart. This is a splendid remedy [illegible] that run-down, tired, indifferent [illegible] you speak of. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and in a short time it will restore your appetite and free your skin from those pimples and liver blotches which now annoy you.

Lucy M.: You have made a great mistake in neglecting your hair so long. But it is not too late to restore it to its former beauty, even if it is "falling, scurfy and weak hair," as you call it. Regular use of a good quinine hair tonic will accomplish wonders. To make this tonic, get one ounce of quinzoin from your druggist, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol and add one-half pint of water. Rub this tonic into the scalp and hair roots two or three times a week, and it will restore your scalp to a healthy condition, feed the hair follicles, giving your hair new life and causing it to grow in thick, long and glossy. Your sister will find this same quinzoin tonic the right and true remedy for her fading, dull and brittle hair. It will stop the splitting and breaking in one or two applications, but she should continue its use for several weeks and resume the treatment wherever her hair requires it. Read answer to Hermione.

Hermione: You must get the dandruff off your head. Dandruff is a hair destroyer, it chokes the hair, kills it and causes it to fall out. Don't use soap for shampooing; soap leaves the scalp dry and hard, and streaks the hair. I know of only one perfect shampoo and that is canthrox. All first-class druggists sell it. Just dissolve a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water, pour on the head a little at a time and rub well, rinse as you would with any other shampoo; then rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly with clean warm water. Canthrox removes dandruff and relieves itching scalp. It dries quickly and makes the hair soft, bright and fluffy. For [illegible] use quinzoin described in the preceding paragraph.

V. B. H.: It has been [illegible] trying season for even the strongest eyes and you are only one of thousands who are suffering from sore, red and inflamed eyes. To relieve the irritation, redness and granulated lids, get an ounce of crystos from your druggist, dissolve it in a pint of water and drop one or two drops in each eye whenever the eyes feel tired, weak or sore. The use of this harmless tonic gives brilliancy and expression [illegible] gives brightness and expression to the eyes, keeping them clear and bright. It is a favorite [illegible] with actresses and society women.

Betty: I don't know who said "Any fool can get a husband, but it takes a wise woman to keep one," but it does pretty near to being true. For the sake of your present and future happiness don't neglect your complexion. Don't let your skin become sallow, dark, coarse or rough, don't let it wrinkle or sag. Use this home-made cream jelly for massage and as a face cream. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, dissolve it in a half-pint of cold water, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, stir well and let stand over night. This is "the cream without grease." It won't cause hair to grow. Gently massage your face and neck and you will find it feeds the skin, seeking out the deepest layers, the deepest tissues, the deepest cells, and there works like Nature works, thoroughly and surely for skin health, purity, color and freshness. It not only restores a lost complexion but creates a new one.

ELI TEAM BANKS ON SCORELESS TIE

Harry Vaughan, Star End on the Yale Eleven, Will Play in Great Battle with Harvard.

Yale Eleven Runs Through Fine Signal Practice To-day to Master Shevlin's Formations.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17.—With great Harvard game two days off, the remarkable improvement of the Eli [illegible] the acquisition of Vaughan, the [illegible] end, and other promising developments led Yale supporters to-day to predict scoreless tie Saturday, even if Yale [illegible] to win from Harvard.

Rumors that Yale is too close to edge to be comfortable are in the air. [illegible] has never taken its eleven out of [illegible] for two days previous to a Harvard [illegible] till this year. Harry Vaughan, one of last season['s] star ends will play in the Harvard [illegible] While Brooks will start the game [illegible] right end, it is not [illegible] that he will stay there long, for Vaughan is slated to play there.

Vaughan was captain of the freshman team two years ago. Last year he was end on the varsity. It was not [illegible] until just before the Princeton game that Vaughan was in condition. He [illegible] been in a lineup more than [illegible] minutes the whole season [illegible] has eaten with the [illegible] every day [illegible] after the team [illegible] perfect [illegible].

Stand By Tiger Lineup.

Captain [illegible] to-day [illegible] that the same lineup [illegible] start the Harvard game as did the Princeton game. [illegible] is also lutely no truth in the story that Reed Kilpatrick is out of [illegible] He [illegible] himself [illegible] was [illegible].

[illegible] against Harvard [illegible] as follows: [illegible] Scully [illegible] Fuller [illegible] Brooks [illegible]

The Yale squad was to have gone to Meriden to-day to stay at the Meriden Country Club [illegible] but the management received word that the whole squad could not be accommodated [illegible] the whole [illegible] the players remain here and [illegible] the New Haven Lawn Club. They practice on Yale Field to-day after the Harvard squad gets through.

The team finally has some uniforms to don. The regular outfit [illegible] has just been rescued from the crush of the New York express strike. The trunks went astray on the return from Princeton. Telegraphing did no good and two agents of the football association finally went down to Jersey City and hunted up the lost articles, engaging an auto truck at a [illegible] and [illegible] the goods aboard a train for New Haven.

Many predictions of a scoreless game are being made here. The situation is [illegible] when Jim Rodgers's eleven [illegible] Harvard's wonderful team captained by [illegible] Harvard [illegible] outplayed Yale [illegible] the game was at Cambridge over which the hoodoo of inability to defeat Yale [illegible] hung.

Rely On Center Trio.

Yale men feel that their wonderful [illegible] is underestimated by Harvard. It is claimed here that Yale's center trio, [illegible] Morris and McDevitt, will play [illegible] powerful [illegible] set of eleven [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] to keep at [illegible] McDevitt [illegible] in subduing [illegible] Saturday.

[illegible] wonderful combination [illegible] finished [illegible] is due to the work of [illegible] ter Sanford, father of the Yale defense, to whom has been entrusted all the season the task of building a compact Yale [illegible].

Ralph Boomer's prediction that when Yale checks the Harvard attack, as he firmly believes the sturdy Eli line will be able to do, Harvard will be staggered for the first time this season, and Yale will [illegible] for a time, perhaps long enough to score possibly the [illegible] of the game.

[illegible] the view of a coach who has been with the eleven most of the season, who [illegible] possibilities, and who [illegible] knows a few Harvard weaknesses.

Yale laughs at the Harvard line attack. The coaches hope that Harvard will use [illegible] there is no surer way of using up the power and steam of the forward [illegible] than by sending them into the present Yale [illegible].

The only method of gaining against Yale which the [illegible] are not sure of stopping is some novelty in forward pass [illegible]. If Harvard pulls off something of that nature it will prove itself worthy [illegible].

[illegible] thought that the [illegible] wonderful [illegible] upright [illegible] Princeton last Saturday after a kick from the 47-yard mark [illegible] of the prettiest [illegible] at Yale.

When Harvard Rea ched New Haven.

TED COY PREDICTS VICTORY FOR YALE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 17.—Ted [illegible] coach of the Yale football eleven to-day [illegible] Saturday's [illegible] with Harvard [illegible] for Yale. He said:

"I have no reason to [illegible] my opinion expressed several days ago that I think Yale will win from Harvard on Saturday. Everything [illegible] along [illegible] It is going to be a much harder opposition than last Saturday, but I think Yale will put out the [illegible] the players are in fine shape and we are not worrying over that end of the business. We will show those Harvard people something Saturday and we will [illegible]."

CALL OF THE RING TOO MUCH FOR BOXER

By Jimmie Dunn.

Every [illegible] of some old star in the [illegible] trying to [illegible] back [illegible] Kid [illegible] of Chicago, who was one of [illegible] light [illegible] in the world [illegible] to 11 [illegible] now trying to [illegible] promoter to [illegible]

[illegible] was Terry McGovern, who [illegible] to come back several times [illegible] would not [illegible] put him on [illegible]

Then [illegible] Young [illegible] tries to [illegible] every [illegible] in a while, but [illegible] fighter beats him [illegible] from Corbett for a few [illegible] breaks [illegible] some other part of the country fighting [illegible]

He just can't quit the game [illegible] boxing as long as he can make a living or enough to keep [illegible] in training.

Even old Jeff could not quit. He retired champion, but the call of the ring was too much for him [illegible] had to come back, and it would not surprise me to hear of Jeffries getting some one a few years later. Look at Fitzsimmons [illegible] though he is fifty years old he still tries [illegible] some one.

There seems to be something [illegible] fighting game that [illegible] some people [illegible] say it is [illegible] I really think it is the [illegible] of some [illegible] have [illegible] money to keep going.

Being [illegible] pugilist myself I know [illegible] how they feel. You [illegible] I were not managing [illegible] and the rest of my boys I [illegible] would be fighting, but I get all the boxing I want.

Dunn May Try Again Himself.

But I often long for a real fight in the ring, but I have gone through about two hundred battles and have never been hurt or carry any [illegible] as they call them. I have been a lot [illegible] lucky than the average pugilist [illegible] and other [illegible] I [illegible] get in the gym every day [illegible] to [illegible] some [illegible] ever I will be satisfied to keep out of the ring.

But if my boys were [illegible] back I suppose I would be with the rest of the [illegible] trying to come back.

Despite the fact that I am boxing every day with my boys, the lust for the ring gets [illegible] so strong at [illegible] it is all I can do to keep out.

And to tell the truth, it is only the fact that my mother [illegible] that keeps me from [illegible] I [illegible] the papers that I might fight Bat Nelson worried her for [illegible] But at last I expect sometime to join the big list of others and [illegible] my reentry into the ring.

Corbett Carries Gloves With Him.

Jim Corbett is another example of the fighter who can't give up the game completely. He went out and worked with Jim Jeffries [illegible] engagements [illegible]

And why? Simply because he couldn't stay away, and [illegible] was more truth than [illegible] in his declaration some time ago that if Jeff did not fight Johnson that he would. And [illegible] believe that he would [illegible]

Corbett still has that desire to mix it [illegible] the ring and carries a pair of boxing gloves with him all the time. And when ever he gets a chance in any city he is always in a gymnasium expounding to [illegible] as [illegible] this punch and that and how the weak [illegible] of his [illegible]

Tom Sharkey, who is now [illegible] wealthy, is still trying to get a fight [illegible] Johnson and is reported [illegible] daily in New York. It [illegible] he is after, for he has all [illegible] needs, but simply the call of [illegible] that he cannot resist.

The Real Reason.

Battling Nelson, called [illegible] "Millionaire," is still training and [illegible] and hopes to win back his championship from Ad Wolgast.

It is just the game and the [illegible] that keeps him in the fight game, as he owns half of Hegewisch, Ill., and has enough to keep himself royally for the rest of his days.

Kid McCoy, who owns [illegible] a ton, is a diamond broker [illegible] one of the wealthiest [illegible] still is in the game [illegible] He fought [illegible] a year [illegible] Willie Lewis.

"Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien [illegible] richest pugilists in the world [illegible] and manages a boxing [illegible] phia, and is still fighting.

Religiously inclined people [illegible] is the evil of a man that [illegible] others say it is only for [illegible] but it's the game itself [illegible] a fascination for those who [illegible] they cannot quit.

"3-20-8" Is a Hit

No play ever made a bigger or quicker hit in Boston than has the "3-20-8" Cigar. Every day thousands more of the knowing smokers are learning how downright good this honest smoke is. Made by experts—of selected Havana leaf—in a clean, snappy American factory—of course it's good. And it's better when you think of its price.

Mary's Careless Ways.

"Individual responsibility for clean streets" is thus expressed in verse in The Municipality, through the overworked Mary and her lamb.

MARY had a little lamb
  Between her bread and butter.
She didn't like its flavor, so
  She threw it in the gutter.

Mary had a paper wrapped
  About her luncheon neat.
She didn't need it any more
  So she threw it in the street.

Mary dropped her orange peel,
  She thought it was no harm,
Last [illegible] or I might slip on it
  And nearly break my arm.

Mary gaily tripped away,
  On pleasure she was bound,
And, oh, it was so long before,

  To see the refuse can,
For, if she had, there wouldn't be
  Any need of a "pick up" man.

Waiting at the Gate---By Nell Brinkley

♣ Lysander John ♣

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON had heard of the ideal man ever since his wedding day, and finding himself alone one evening with a lot of his wife's favorite literature on the table, and no one to catch him in the act of reading it, he searched the books and magazines carefully that he might find out the pattern of his wife's ideal husband and make himself like him. And when he arose and went to bed an hour later, it was with a brain sagging like an overweighted hammock with the information he had obtained. And a noble resolution was added to the weight. He had found her ideal in the books and would be the him!

The next morning the steak was burned, but on the plate beside the meat his wife (who had been an ideal wife for years without appreciation) had placed a rose.

Lysander John sniffed at the rose in manifest joy. "Nature," he said, "is wonderful. Who is there among us mere mortals who can match a creation like that?"

Mrs. Lysander John gasped. For years she had tried to raise his mind to such lofty heights, and had failed.

The coffee was poor, but the water, ah, that water! Sparkling and clear, it reminded him of a spring away back in his boyhood home, and he quoted poetry as he drank, ignoring the steak and the coffee.

"I have had a delightful breakfast," he said, putting down his empty glass. "The memory of that rose with the dew on it, and the simple joys of my boyhood home that that water has recalled, will sustain me throughout the day."

Then he raised her hand to his lips and kissed it, and bowed himself out of the room. But his wife did not note the manner of his exit, for she had swooned away.

(Note—Some women faint, but it is a later style to swoon.)

That evening when the ideal man came home he carried instead of the customary steak, a bunch of violets.

"They reminded me of your eyes," he said to his wife, who was standing in the kitchen heating a pan for the steak.

"Where," she gasped, "is the meat?"

"I forgot it," he said. "That rose with the dew on this morning lifted my mind above all that is gross. Come and sit with me in the tender gloaming while I read a poem I composed and dedicated to you.

"Lysander John Appleton," she snapped, "what is the matter with you? Are you going crazy?"

"It is about the Higher Life," he replied, paying no heed to her interruption. "I composed it to-day instead of doing my work. It raised me to the heights as no work could ever do."

"Come to your supper," she replied, "and quit your talk about the gloaming. I am not going to let my children starve because I married a fool."

There was little on the table, but Lysander John ate cheerfully. "I see," he said, "that you have baked potatoes. It is hard work to put a potato in the oven to bake, and it is my desire that in future you refrain from such arduous labor and relax more."

His wife dropped her knife and fork in stunned amazement.

He made one more suggestion: "I see no flowers on the table. Are we retrograding? Are we mere animals that we care more for gratifying the gross desires than for satisfying the longings of the soul?"

But Mrs. Lysander John didn't reply. With a deep groan she stiffened and fell to the floor, foaming at the mouth as if she were having an attack of hydrophobia, or demonstrating a tooth wash.

And Lysander John, the Candidate for the Ideal, went up on the roof that no one could see him laugh.

How to Retain Beauty

By MARY R. ALLING

IF you would keep and increase the beauty with which nature dowered you at birth, you must cultivate high thoughts, fine emotions, temperance and self-control.

The Greeks were the most beautiful people of ancient times. Some critics have given to us, the people of the United States, the palm for beauty in this, our day. Whether we deserve this commendation or not, judged by the highest standards, we are not yet a beautiful people; and, to become one, it is desirable that we should change our national motto, which seems to be "Everything in Excess," to that of the Greeks, which was "Nothing Too Much."

As you go to and fro in business, shopping and social pleasures, look for your ideal of beauty in the children, the women and the men whom you meet. You will see much promise of beauty in the young and little fulfilment in the adults; yet, childhood shows many fine possibilities of beauty that have been neglected or ruined.

In ultimate analysis the beauty of an adult face is the beauty of expression, and that beauty is the composite product of all the thoughts and emotions that are allowed to express themselves on the face. As you look at the adult faces you can often tell just what kind of thought and emotion their owners have indulged to the marring of beauty.

Arrogance, harshness, greed, selfishness, secrecy, cunning, falsehood, cowardice, fear, laziness, hate, envy, conquest at any price, despair and failure are suggested on the faces; and they are there because their owners have allowed these qualities to become active factors in their mental life.

None of us are perfect, and an occasional stirring up of the mud of bad passions and spewing it out is good for the soul; but one should beware of how much mud he creates, lest he become unable to react against it and spew it out.

And it is generally better to suppress the expression and get rid of the mud of vicious thoughts and unholy emotions without any one else's knowing one has had them. For every such thought and emotion that one allows another person to see on our faces, to hear in our voices, to affect the posture of our bodies, leaves its impress in our muscles; and the same or similar impress, often repeated, becomes indelible, becomes permanent on the face, in the voice and in the carriage of the body.

Moreover, every such thought and emotion crowds out its opposite, and these opposites are not only in themselves the loveliest expressions of our human nature, they are the makers and preservers of beauty.

To be modest and gentle, to be generous and considerate, to be frank and truthful, to have courage and industry and hope, to love, to feel compassion, to help another to win, to strive against all odds, these are not only the attributes that make the noblest successes in life, they are likewise the most potent makers of physical beauty.

For the body is only a vehicle which constantly adjusts itself to the needs of the user of it who dwells within; it is the clothes of the soul, and he who does not wish others to think that his soul is coarse and mean and ugly must take pains to show, by his bodily expressions, that he is fine and large and lovely within.

Mankind has come from the stone up through the plant and the beast, during millions of years in desert and forest and jungle, and the attributes of those ages are a substratum in us all. But, having become human, been allowed to incarnate in a body made in the image of God, each one of us should try to suppress the selfish insensibility of the stone, the indolent fixity of the plant and the cruel brutalities of the beast, in order that we may grow toward the god-likeness and be truly human.

Into our hands is committed the further process of evolution; and to retain and increase the beauty one started with is only to be faithful to our most manifest obligation.

THE DOUBLE CROSS ♣ ♣ ♣ A Great American Mystery Story by Gilson Willets

CHAPTER XXIII.—(Continued)

In the Catacombs

"D[illegible] you to say, my [illegible]

[illegible]

"What have you to say, my son?" the Don repeated.

"[illegible] is not necessary, Don. In my relations with your daughter there is no—[mis]take."

Then prompted again and again by the voice of the Unseen breathing close to my ear, I went on:

"Don Justino, I cannot tell you all [I do] not know. I can only assure you that, through me, you will at last learn what happened on the night Felipa was born, and that a great new happiness will come to bless the rest of your life. Meantime, I repeat, there is no—mistake—in my relations with your daughter. I shall marry [no]ne but the one who bears—the sign of a cross."

"And tell him," whispered the Unseen, "that his daughter bears the sign of the [cross]."

"For your daughter herself, Don Justino," I repeated, "bears the sign of the [cross]."

As I said these words the Unseen slipped from my arms, then whispered these astounding words:

"I warned you that you were deceiving yourself. My name is not Felipa."

I heard the receding rustle of her garments, and at the same time the Don cried in sharp exclamations of distress:

"The cross! Dios! Por Dios! What are you saying?"

A Grim Intent

As he spoke he struck a match; and in its little flare I saw a figure in white, behind the Don—saw the figure stepping hurriedly out of the radius of light and moving toward the exit from the Chamber of Horrors. The sight of the figure in white lasted not longer than a flash of lightning, but it was sufficient for me to see her glossy black tresses and her beauteous face.

It was Felipa.

The Don had relighted the torch and now I looked at him, saw that his face had taken on an ashen hue.

"In the name of the Death that here stares at us," he pleaded, "tell me, my son what you know of the cross."

"I can add nothing just now to what I have already told you, Don Justino. I can only repeat once more—there is no mistake."

The Don brought the torch again close to my face, peered into my eyes—then suddenly turned away and seemed lost in meditation. After a full minute of thought, he seemed to regain his usual composure, and said:

"Forgive me, my son. Forgive me for resorting to this theatrical proceeding. I do not comprehend what lies behind your words regarding the mystery of the night of Felipa's birth. But, I am a [illegible] you are stumbling along, doing your very best [illegible] Let us return to daylight."

After we had rejoined the portero, and while the Don plied him with questions regarding the ghostly forms that lined the walls, I muttered:

"God of my soul! That woman of the Catacombs—was Felipa! Why did she deny herself? Ah! I'll know to-night. To-night she will wear a decolete gown for the opera—and I will discover whether or not she bears the sign of the cross, even if, to gain that knowledge, I have to act like a very bandit."

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Golden One's Smile

AS we rode back to town, I ruminated:

"Mistake? I see myself in those Catacombs sure as fate—if Felipa proves not to be the woman of the cross and therefore not the woman of the marriage contract—that is, if I continue my relations with her too long before getting a look at her right arm."

"Don Justino," I said, "you did not know my father, of course not. His name was the same as mine—John St. John. Did Felipa know him?"

"Not that I am aware, my son."

"Then how could he have possibly trained her—you say Alvarado resembled my father? How long ago did Alvarado die?"

"A little over a year ago. And I often wonder that no one has solved the mystery of his death. He went for a visit to the States. It seems that he had not been there for some eight or nine years before. And he never came back. That's all the public knows. I believe, however, that our President knows the facts but all he would say when I asked him what became of Alvarado, was: 'Mexico's most brilliant, daring and most worthy, if most eccentric, citizen is dead.'"

"You say, Don, a year ago?—and had not been in the States before that for [illegible] years? Why, that corresponds to facts relating to my own father's passing. And his ward, the Golden Senorita! He brought [her up], trained her for wifehood, motherhood, and'——

"[illegible] a wonder," the Don said, "that your friends in Mexico did not point out the Alvarado Mansion to you, as you rode by. For it is there the Senorita Alva lives alone with her duena—one of the finest houses in the capital, where she holds a weekly salon during the season, entertaining foreign ambassadors and distinguished travelers bewitching all by her brilliant mental attainments and by her physical splendor, enthralling all with her graciousness and nobility of character."

The Golden One Appears

Reaching the Don's office, vaqueros led away our horses, and the Don said he would attend to business till dinner time.

I strolled away—stopping presently at a bookshop on the Alameda to purchase a novel that I had read and which I thought would interest Felipa. Its title was "The Man of the Lost Memory."

Then bound for del Treveno's, I started across the beautiful Alameda, where great palms and palmettos, giant cacti and [illegible] country trees and plants, together with vines and flowers, grew in tropical luxuriance, making the public garden a [illegible] of jungle.

I thought of what the Don had just told me of the Golden Senorita; also of what Larry Annesley had told me of her, at the American Embassy, in Mexico City.

"With that training," I murmured, "one would think she were really my——!"

To my unspeakable astonishment, I saw the Golden Senorita herself at that moment at the far end of the path, coming toward me, her elderly duena with her as usual. I saw her look at her watch. I looked at mine, too. Were we both thinking of the same thing, namely—the Angelus?

As before, she was robed in white, and her duena in black.

[They] walked very slowly. So did I. And then—the bells began ringing the Angelus.

The Golden Smile

The Golden Senorita now quickened her step, leaving the duena to trail along behind. As she approached me, then, her eyes were lowered, precisely as in the Alameda at Mexico City.

And just as she reached me, again as in that other Alameda—she deliberately made the sign of the cross.

Then, wide those gorgeous, loveful, earnest eyes opened—to flash again that peculiarly meaningful look into mine, and again her lips parted in that divine smile.

I [gazed] at her this time, hungrily, her [illegible] beauty thrilling me.

[illegible] calm majesty of her person had an almost overpowering effect [illegible] my impulse being to kneel at [illegible] right there in the path, as the [illegible] Aztec drops before the idol [illegible] has no understanding.

[illegible] the Golden Senorita.

[illegible] after her now, a hundred [illegible] emotions causing my heart to beat [illegible] that a feeling of dizziness [illegible] and I sat down on a nearby [illegible]

"[illegible] Alva," I whispered, "you are—[illegible] Your child is—Mankind. How [illegible] love love, love—a man."

A man! Was that man the son of [Leo]n Alvarado? Did she love that individual that no one I had met had ever seen? They had told me she was betrothed to him.

"[illegible]" I muttered, getting [illegible] something to me to [illegible]

"Follow her," said a voice within me, just as in that hour of the Angelus in Mexico City.

I walked quickly in the direction which she had taken through the little jungle till I came in sight of her. There again was that splendidly free, elastic step of the woman of outdoors, the daughter of forest and mountain and desert.

Yes! She was something to me. Otherwise, why had she appeared to the Aztecs the day before and told them of my betrothal? And——

I stopped in my tracks, to think. Diego had said that she had left Guanajuato the evening before. Yet here she was.

And I hurried after her. I would speak to her, ask her about everything. Meantime, I asked myself why she had flashed that look at me, then assured myself that it was because I so strongly resembled the son of Leon Alvarado—whom she loved.

"Fool! Fool!" said the voice within me. "You love the girl of the convent and the woman of the steamer—and the woman of the Catacombs and she is Felipa."

Alva is only the sorceress, I murmured. And I told myself that I followed her now because I could not help it, because she had cast her spell over me, had enchanted me, depriving me of my own will.

Just then her companion rejoined her and the two turned out of the Alameda, and into a side street.

Desperate at the thought of losing the opportunity to speak to her, I sprinted to the corner of the street which the Golden Senorita had entered, only to find myself face to face—with Felipa, who was emerging from the street just as I was about to enter it.

"You!" I exclaimed.

"And you!" she panted, much out of breath.

She seemed deeply agitated. Her cheeks were flushed, her eyes were aflame with suppressed excitement.

"You've been running, Felipa."

"So have you, John."

"You were running after the Golden Senorita," I said.

"So were you, John. Now never mind explanations. I do not blame you. She interests me, too. I got a good look at her—at last."

"Did she enter—is she stopping at some house in this street?" I asked.

"I don't know. She gave me a look, John, that seemed to tell me that she would take all my troubles from me and bear them herself, if only I would let her."

"Your troubles, Felipa?"

"Yes. Principally you—Jack. But there! You go on now to the del Trevenos'. I'll be there in time for dinner. I'm on my way—let me think? Where was I going, John?"

"The photographer's. I'll go with you."

MARY BOYLE O'REILLY THANKS AMERICAN

My Dear Sir—In giving so much publicity to the Baby Farms investigation and th[illegible] ing legislation in New Hampshire, the Boston American has done a great public service for which I, as a social worker, [wa]nt to thank you.

Day's Best Story

LORD MINTO, Viceroy of India, said recently that nothing could surpass in delicacy the reply made to him by one of his servants.

"Well, what kind of sport has our distinguished guest had?" he asked the man who attended an American visitor.

"Oh," replied the scrupulously polite Hindu, "the young sahib shot divinely, but Providence was very merciful to the birds."

No Limit

WHEN you hear a startling tale—
  Like to Jonah and the whale,
You will utter without fail,
    "That's the limit!"

You are told of something new
That most startling things will do,
And you give a scornful "Pooh!
    "That's the limit!"

'Tis the common human way
Things that puzzle us to flay,
While with sneers and jibes we say,
    "That's the limit!"

Oftentimes the thing we've spurned
Has to mighty triumph turned;
Pretty soon we will have learned
    There's no limit!

For the Woman That's Fat.

A Detroit physician says that the cheapest and safest mixture a fat woman who wants to get thin can use is ½ ounce Marmola (get it in the original ½-ounce package), ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Peppermint Water. The proper amount to take is a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Desperate Desmond

WE'VE GOT YOU NOW DESMOND. AND THE LAW WILL TAKE ITS COURSE. AND ROSAMOND IS MINE CURSES!
WIRE DOWN!
44
NOW FOR MY DASH FOR LIBERTY. I'LL FOOL THIS CLAUDE YET!
THEY CAN'T HOLD DESMOND
YOU CANNOT ESCAPE JUSTICE DESMOND. BETTER SURRENDER OR YOU WILL BE SMASHED. GIVE UP!
I WILL NEVER BE TAKEN ALIVE
MOVING VAN
GREAT VIOLETS! THIS IS A FOXED RUSE AND I CAN'T STOP THIS DO-MORE-THAN MACHINE
GET OUT OF THE VAN HA HA

Desperate Desmond is tied up good and tight to the trolley rope, and he'll have to do some tall sprinting to keep from being dragged by the car. In case the villain should break loose, Claude is right behind him in Desmond's automobile. Looks bad for Desmond, what!

ha! The trolley wire is down. Some of Desmond's confederates must have been getting busy. A high-class villain like Desmond always has a bunch of henchmen to help him out. You can't do much villainy single-handed these days. There are too many heroes on the job.

When the car stopped, Desmond kept right on running. If he hadn't he would have been struck by Claude's automobile. Were you ever hit by an auto? It hurts. But that is not Desmond's only reason for running in front of the car. He has a plan. Wait and you shall see.

And you notice how neatly the live wire burned the rope in two. Desperate Desmond is at liberty once more. However, Claude is still after him in the auto, and Desmond hasn't got the trolley car to pace him now. Perhaps it wasn't such a bright idea after all.

The villain is stealing a ride on the moving van, but that wont help him a great deal. Those vans aren't much for speed. Claude ought to catch him in about ten seconds. Oh, look! What is the car up to now? Is this some devilish plot to foil Claude? Yes, dear reader, it is.

And a mighty clever plot it is, too! You've got to hand it to Desmond for his ingenuity. Who else would have thought of dropping the tail board of the van and letting Claude drive right in? What will he do next? Have patience. The next pictures will be out to-morrow.

Wobble Folk

By ADA PATTERSON

DON'T be one of the wobble folk!

Wobble folk are trouble folk. They are the human brothers and sisters of that insect pest, the mosquito. They are provokers of profanity, stirrers of sedition and they are retarders of progress because while they move—indeed they are never at rest—they arrive nowhere for they always move sidewise.

Wobble folks are disturbers of the calmer, more solid portion of the race because they are uncertain quantities. One can never count upon them. There is only one certainty about them and that is that they are uncertain.

The late Tom Reed complained about political wobble folk when he said there was a class of politicians that never "stay put."

The chief character of wobble folk is that they change their minds oftener than they change their clothes. The person that transacts business with them, the persons who pay court to them or marry them, are promising candidates for early gray hairs.

Wobble folk are conscious of this peculiarity, and they make a novel defense of it. "I meant it when I said it," they say with an air of vindication, and that, no doubt, is true. But the maddening trait of these wavering folk is that they don't keep on meaning it, whatever it is. Wobble folk keep steady folk busy correcting their mistakes, or exacting punishment for them. The courts would be as empty as echoing caves if it were not for the oscillating brothers and sisters. They furnish business for the lawyers and tenants for the jails.

They are the promise breakers of the world. Quick to make promises, they are just as quick to break them. The natural order is the reverse. We should be as careful about making a promise as crossing a river on a rickety bridge. But having made the promise we should keep it, though an earthquake shook the ground beneath our feet.

A man made a life-long enemy and deserved it. At the beginning of a new business he told one of those men who had helped him by willing service that he would give him a block of stock and make him a partner. Instead, after years had passed, he gave the blocks of stock and the partnership to someone else. The man whom he forgot, or ignored, or tricked, set about wrecking the business and has succeeded. He went to the promise breaker among the ruins of his prosperity, and reminded him of his broken promise. Not a noble act this, and certainly a wasted one, for you can't cure a confirmed wobbler.

To change this wobbling habit the wobbler must be caught early, in the days of long dresses and teething rings and colic. He must be taught then to make his decisions slowly and stoutly to stand by them. He must learn that a promise is a thing as sacred as Holy Writ, that every man's or woman's promise is a later Scripture. They must know that a promise breaker is a despicable creature, one smirched to every one who knows of the broken promise, as with dishonor. The child who deliberately or carelessly breaks a promise should be spanked as soundly as the child who has told a lie. For there is no essential difference between the two.

Friends of the wobbler say that there were greater attributes than consistency, and that we must change our minds to advance. Our minds, yes; our opinions, yes; just as when we climb a mountain path the flowers that grow at the base are succeeded by dwarfed trees that grow about its snow-crowned summit. Progress means change of mental scenery. But a promise is one of the immovable things in a universe of change. Charily given, it should be splendidly kept.

All business is based upon a promise, real or implied. Marriage is a contract between two persons to keep their courtship promises. The promise breaker is the loose brick in the structure of society.

Cast the eye of memory back along the backward path of your life. Who were the persons who were steps in your upward path? The promise keepers. Who were the thorns and shadows along that path? The promise breakers; the violators of contracts; the wobblers

Talk Not of Age

By ALFRED AUSTIN, Poet Laureate of England

TALK not of age; the waning years,
Leave one more wise as they depart,
And with them mingle smiles and tears,
If one but young remains at heart.
The seasons come, the seasons go,
But with revolving days return,
Till Winter's evanescent snow
Melts in the laughing, leaping burn.

And when the cuckoo calls again,
The sap of April floods one's veins;
And as he flies from glen to glen,
Rejoicing in Spring's sunlit rains,
I feel as young as even he,
Seeking him near, afar, above,
Echoing his name, in playful glee
Of faithless undomestic love.

Nor when deep Summer silence rests
On windless thicket, sheltered lawn,
From thoughtful hearts and pious breasts
Is Nature's sympathy withdrawn.
The faithful cushat faintly heard,
Repeats the simple note of home,
Teaching the lesson, wisest bird,
How blest are those not prone to roam.

Married Life the First Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WARREN hung up his coat and hat and came in with brisk cheerfulness.

"I say, Helen, wouldn't you like to go to the theatre? Bob Carter sent me some passes to-day."

"The theatre? Why, I couldn't take the baby."

"Well, I rather guess not!"

"And I couldn't leave her."

"Why not?"

"Why, she's too little."

"Nonsense! Marie can take care of her to-night."

Helen looked doubtful.

"You haven't been anywhere for months," he assured her stoutly. "It will do you a world of good. Let's have dinner early and go."

"But——"

"Oh, now don't begin to find excuses. It'll do you good, I tell you. It's time you were getting out some."

Getting Ready to Leave

It ended by their hurrying through dinner. Helen dressed while vacillating between her room and the nursery. She gave innumerable instructions to Marie about the baby. Minute details as to what to do or not to do—covering every possible emergency.

To all of them Marie murmured her stolid "Yes, ma'am; yes, ma'am."

"Now, don't forget to keep this door closed; if it gets too warm you can turn off the radiator."

"Yes, m'am."

"You know the right milk—the bottle on the lower shelf of the ice box. That other bottle is yesterday's—be sure and don't get that."

"Yes, m'am."

"Now, if anything should happen—or go wrong—you are to telephone at once to the theatre as I told you. I've written down the number on this card, and I'll put it up here right over the telephone—here, do you see? Now we will leave the location of our seats at the ticket window, so all you have to do is to ask for Mr. and Mrs. Curtis. Now do you think you understand?"

"Yes, m'am."

"And when you——"

"Hurry up there!" came from the front room where Warren was waiting impatiently. "It's ten minutes of eight now."

"Yes, I know—I'm almost ready." And then to Marie: "When you take her up, be sure to support her back with your hand as I've shown you. You must be very careful about that—I've told you so many times and yet the other day I saw you——"

"I say, Helen, are you coming or not? If you stay here giving endless directions——"

"Yes—yes—in just a moment." Then to Marie, "And be sure to keep her feet warm. Here's an extra blanket—I'll leave it right here. And here's a——"

But Warren had come to the door.

"We're not going to Europe, you know. We're just going to the theatre. Don't you think you've left enough directions to cover about three hours?"

"Yes, I know—but if it should take cold while we're away—I'd never forgive myself."

"Well, it's asleep now, and it'll probably sleep till we get back. Now are you ready?"

"All but my gloves," searching hurriedly through her top bureau drawer.

It was after eight when they finally got off and after half-past when they reached the theatre. Helen insisted on stopping to leave their names and the location of their seats with the man at the ticket window.

"And if anyone should telephone—you will send the usher for us at once?" she demanded anxiously.

The man nodded indifferently and turned to the party behind her, who was asking for "orchestra seats."

"Third row of the balcony—nothing down stairs."

Helen turned away reluctant. "Oh, do you suppose he will remember—he seemed to pay so little attention. Hadn't you better speak to him again?"

But Warren dragged her on impatiently. "Can't you see how late we are?"

The theatre was darkened and the curtain went up as they entered. The usher finally took their tickets and led them stumbling down the aisle.

Their seats were in the centre of the row and half a dozen people had to be disturbed before they could be reached. The men stood up, while the women, with ill-concealed impatience, clutched at their hats on their laps and drew back their skirts.

"This comes of your making us late," Warren whispered angrily. "Having to crawl all over those people!"

"Hush-ss-ss, dear, don't," laying a conciliatory hand on his arm.

Just then a very pretty girl rushed on the stage and Warren's attention was for the moment diverted.

Helen's Many Fears

After the first act, while Warren was trying to figure out the characters on the program, Helen asked anxiously.

"Don't you think you'd better go out and see if she has telephoned? I don't think that man paid any attention to what I said. Perhaps if you'd ask him if there has been any message——"

"Crawl over all those people again? Not if I know it."

"But, Warren, suppose she has telephoned—suppose something should have happened? Marie's a new nurse girl, you know, and I don't feel quite——"

"Well what on earth could have happened—we haven't been gone forty-five minutes! Here, do you want a drink?" As the boy came by with the glasses of water in a wire basket.

Helen shook her head. She told herself that, perhaps, she was foolish to worry so about the baby—but somehow she couldn't help it.

"Not a bad show," Warren commented easily. "That man's a duffer, but the girl is pretty good."

Helen assented absently.

In the second act the serious illness of a child was referred to—the child whose death in the third act was to reunite the parents.

The applause had hardly died out after the curtain when she turned to Warren nervously.

"Oh, you must go now! If there isn't any message—call up Marie and find out if everything is all right."

"I tell you, Helen, I'm not going to crawl over those people again."

"Then I'll have to go myself. I can't sit through another act without knowing my baby's all right."

"Why did you come then—if you want to be flying to the 'phone every five minutes?"

"Why, you insisted on my coming!"

"Well, I'm damn sorry I did—if it's going to be like this."

"Now don't—please don't be cross! It's the first time I left her and you know I can't help being anxious."

In the end he went, apologizing to the people over whose laps he stumbled and who glared at him coldly.

He returned just as the bell buzzed for the curtain.

"Well?" she whispered eagerly.

"Couldn't get any answer to the 'phone," curtly.

"Couldn't get any answer?" excitedly.

"No, guess the nurse girl has gone to sleep. That means the baby's asleep, too."

"Oh, something has happened! Something dreadful has happened—that's why you couldn't get an answer to the 'phone! My baby may be kidnapped for all you know." She was gathering up her wraps from the back of the seat. "I'm going home now—do you think I can sit here when I don't know where my baby is?"

The curtain went up here and he caught her arm and held her firmly in her seat.

"You are going to stay right here. If you haven't a particle of common sense—I'll have to have it for you, that's all. Now you're going nowhere until the end of this play."

Useless to Combat

There was a note of finality in his voice that Helen had learned it was useless to combat. But to her the half hour of that last act seemed an eternity.

She had her hat on before the curtain fell, and was making her way out before the crowd was fairly on its feet. Warren followed, frowning grimly. But, unheeding him, she pushed her way through to the nearest side exit. Ordinarily her sense of economy kept her from taxicabs even when Warren suggested them, and now she turned to him with a peremptory, "Get a taxicab—it will be quicker!"

With a grumbled comment about "all women being fools," he motioned to a cab across the street.

In a few moments they were whirling towards home. Helen sat in the corner, her hands clasped tight—her mind filled with harrowing pictures of kidnapped babies.

She hardly waited for the cab to stop at their apartment before she jumped to the pavement and ran in to the elevator.

The boy held the car, looking inquiringly toward the door where Warren was paying the taxicab drivr.

"No, no, don't wait for Mr. Curtis! You can come back for him—take me up quick!"

At the door of their apartment she paused, her heart in her throat—then she threw it open. "Marie—Marie!" she called shrilly. "Marie—Marie!"

No answer.

She rushed into the nursery. There was Marie sound asleep, her hand resting on the arm of the chair, and with the baby also asleep in the crib beside her.

After a long breathless look Helen turned to find Warren standing in the door behind her.

"Oh," she laughed tremulously, "Oh, dear, I guess—I guess I am a little fool!"

"Hm," he grunted, "have you just found that out?"

The Women of Australia

By BILLY BRAYTON

AUSTRALIA is a happy land. After all, that is as it should be. For happiness is generally the quality of youth, and Australia is a young country filled with ambition and courage and hope, untrammelled by the traditions that necessarily belong to a nation with a long history, and without a shade of that pessimism which, unfortunately for us, generally accompanies the experience of years.

The Australian cities are new and clean, and we saw none of those dead, grey slums that make the heart sad in American cities. It seemed to me, and, of course, I do not pretend to write with any authority, that the conditions of life in the Antipodes are altogether easier and pleasanter, and that the poor man has a much better time there than he does here.

With the air of newness there is an air of prosperity. The men are alert and eager, rushing to do things and apparently anxious to do them well.

I ought to add that Adelaide is rather different from the other cities that we visited. It has a milder and more grown up appearance and, indeed, in some respects it reminded me of an English cathedral town.

It is not the newness of Australia that makes the people happy and alert, but it is the splendid climate also, a climate that makes out of door life so general and that makes the visitor from the United States think of home.

The Australian women are splendid. I believe they must be among the most beautiful women in the world. Certainly I myself have never seen so many lovely women of [illegible] as I saw at race meetings and state functions in the southern hemisphere.

The Australian women are not only good looking, they are well turned out. They seem to have the knack, as the French would have, and sometimes the Americans, of selecting exactly the right sort of clothes each individual should wear. Every woman knows that there is everything in this art of putting on one's clothes. It is the supreme feminine gift, and perhaps I [illegible] when I say that it is not so common in our country.

The Australian woman has generally excellent taste, and with the independence of her race, even when she is quite well-to-do, she frequently does without the dressmaker altogether, and makes her own clothes. This independence is typical, and is found in every phase of life. The Australian girl cares next to nothing for convention, and lives a free, healthy life, sharing her brothers' pride of country and inspired in a complete and most admirable sense of self-respect.

It has been said that none but happy people really care for tragic art. This seems to have been proved by our Australian tour, for the Australians, as I have said, are undoubtedly a happy people, and we found there a much more general appreciation for Shakespearian tragedy than we have generally found in America.

A Genuine Antique

"ENTHUSIASTIC!" exploded the suburban hostess to her city guest. "Enthusiastic! My dear, can you sit on that fumed oak davenport and tell me you enjoy seeing a woman as enthusiastic about heirlooms as Mrs. Simons is?

"My dear," she continued, "last January when we had paid off the second mortgage and John was able to take some money out of his business for something besides living expenses we decided to refurnish this room with up-to-date furniture. John felt it would be a comfort to throw himself into a chair without being afraid the legs would break under him. And my eyes ached for some furniture that would harmonize with the woodwork and do the room justice. It took us some time to pick out this beautiful Mission furniture that you see, but by March we had made all our selections and we had Higgins, the second-hand man, come and cart away our old stuff.

"Then one evening when John and I were sitting in our mosquito-proof on the porch Mrs. Simons came over. She was wild with joy and I knew she had just hunted down another 'heirloom.'

"'It's the most wonderful bargain,' she cried. 'Really, my dear, I feel ashamed. I feel as if I cheated the poor man.' That's always Mrs. Simon's way. 'Oh, you must come over and see it,' she said, ecstatically. 'The dearest old Colonial sofa! In real old horsehair! And the most beautiful mahogany! A dream, my dear!'

"So we walked across.

"'An heirloom, too,' she gurgled, 'and only $10. Imagine!'

"She ran into the house ahead of us and turned on the electrics. We followed her.

"'Oh, my!' I exclaimed.

"'I knew you'd think so,' she said. 'I am so lucky! This is my greatest find.'

"'It—it—it certainly looks antique,' I ventured.

"'It ought to be antique,' she said in her superior way. 'It was made by Wyt in England and you can't guess where I found it?'

"'Where?' asked John innocently.

"'At Higgins's,' she almost shouted. 'Right in this very village!'

"I tried to look at the ratty old sofa as if I were broken-hearted at having lost the chance of owning it.

"'You can both come over and sit on it any time,' laughed Mrs. Simons.

"I looked down at the left fore leg and could see the same old crack that John had glued so often and I did not feel that it would be safe for two of us to sit on it at the same time.

"John laughed so hard all the way home that I was afraid she would hear us.

"Heirloom!" concluded the hostess. "I guess she wouldn't be so enthusiastic about that heirloom if she knew Higgins paid us a dollar eighty-five for it!"

NEW ARABIAN NIGHTS

The Bohemian Adventures of Prince Florizel

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

THE SUICIDE CLUB.

Story of the Young Man with the Cream Tarts—In Five Instalments

SYNOPSIS.

Prince Florizel, of Bohemia, and his master of horse, Colonel Geraldine, seek adventure in the slums of London. They go incognito and none of the men whom they meet knows they are any different than they represent themselves.

In one of the barrooms in which they take shelter from a March storm they meet a young man who is offering cream tarts from a tray carried by two servants to every one he meets. When a tart is refused, the young man makes an elaborate bow and eats it himself.

The Prince and Colonel Geraldine scrape acquaintance with him and later dine with him. At dinner he tells them of the Suicide Club, and when they express a desire to join the club he says that he will introduce them to the president of it.

They meet the president, and after a searching cross-examination take oath to follow his orders. They are then admitted to the clubrooms, where they find sixteen fellow members lounging, drinking and smoking.

Mr. Malthus described to Colonel Geraldine how the victim for death is selected by the president dealing from a pack of cards to each member in turn. The member who receives the ace of spades is the one who dies that night. As each man has a repugnance to ending his own life an executioner is selected by again dealing the cards. The one who receives the ace of clubs is given instructions for carrying out the president's orders.

The cards are being distributed as to-day's instalment opens.

Fourth Instalment

AS the Prince's turn drew nearer he was conscious of a growing and almost suffocating excitement; but he had somewhat of the gambler's nature and recognized almost with astonishment that there was a degree of pleasure in his sensations. The nine of clubs fell to his lot; the three of spades was dealt to Geraldine, and the queen of hearts to Mr. Malthus, who was unable to suppress a sob of relief.

He of the Tarts is Chosen.

The young man of the cream tarts almost immediately afterward turned over the ace of clubs, and remained frozen with horror, the card still resting on his finger; he had not come there to kill, but to be killed; and the Prince, in his generous sympathy with his position, almost forgot the peril that still hung over himself and his friend.

The deal was coming round again, and still Death's card had not come out. The players held their respiration, and only breathed by gasps. The Prince received another club; Geraldine had a diamond; but when Mr. Malthus turned up his card a horrible noise, like that of something breaking, issued from his mouth; and he rose from his seat and sat down again, with no sign of his paralysis. It was the ace of spades. The honorary member had trifled once too often with his terrors.

Conversation broke out again almost at once. The players relaxed their rigid attitudes, and began to rise from the table and stroll back by twos and threes into the smoking room. The president stretched his arms and yawned, like a man who had finished his day's work. But Mr. Malthus sat in his place, with his head in his hands, and his hands upon the table, drunk and motionless—a thing stricken down.

The prince and Geraldine made their escape at once. In the cold night air their horror of what they had witnessed was redoubled.

"Alas!" cried the Prince, "to be bound by an oath in such a matter! to allow this wholesale trade in murder to be continued with profit and impunity! If I but dared to forfeit my pledge!"

"That is impossible for Your Highness," replied the Colonel, whose honor is the honor of Bohemia. "But I dare, and may with propriety, forfeit mine."

News of the Death

"Geraldine," said the Prince, "if your honor suffers in any of the adventures into which you follow me, not only will I never pardon you, but—what I believe will much more sensibly affect you—I shall never forgive myself."

"I receive Your Highness's commands," replied the Colonel. "Shall we go from this accursed spot?"

"Yes," said the Prince. "Call a cab, in Heaven's name, and let me try to forget in slumber the memory of this night's disgrace."

But it was notable that he carefully read the name of the court before he left it.

The next morning, as soon as the Prince was stirring, Colonel Geraldine brought him a daily newspaper, with the following paragraph marked:

"Melancholy Accident.—This morning, about 2 o'clock, Mr. Bartholomew Malthus of No. 16 Chepstow place, Westbourne Grove, on his way home from a party at a friend's house, fell over the upper parapet in Trafalgar square, fracturing his skull and breaking a leg and an arm. Death was instantaneous. Mr. Malthus, accompanied by a friend, was engaged in looking for a cab at the time of the unfortunate occurrence. As Mr. Malthus was paralytic, it is thought that his fall may have been occasioned by another seizure. The unhappy gentleman was well known in the most respectable circles, and his loss will be widely and deeply deplored."

"If ever a soul went straight to hell," said Geraldine, solemnly, "it was that paralytic man's."

The prince buried his face in his hands, and remained silent.

The Prince's Resolve

"I am almost rejoiced," continued the Colonel, "to know that he is dead. But for our young man of the cream tarts I confess my heart bleeds."

"Geraldine," said the Prince, raising his face, "that unhappy lad was last night as innocent as you and I; and this morning the guilt of blood is on his soul. When I think of the president, my heart grows sick within me. I do not know how it shall be done, but I shall have that scoundrel at my mercy as there is a God in Heaven. What an experience, what a lesson was that game of cards!"

"One," said the Colonel, "never to be repeated."

The prince remained so long without replying that Geraldine grew alarmed.

"You cannot mean to return," he said. "You have suffered too much already. The duties of your high position forbid the repetition of the hazard."

"There is much in what you say," replied Prince Florizel, "and I am not altogether pleased with my own determination. Alas! in the clothes of the greatest potentate, what is there but a man? I never felt my weakness more acutely than now, Geraldine, but it is stronger than I.

"Can I cease to interest myself in the fortunes of the unhappy young man who supped with us some hours ago?

"Can I leave the president to follow his nefarious career unwatched? Can I begin an adventure so entrancing and not follow it to an end?

"No, Geraldine; you ask of the prince more than the man is able to perform. To-night, once more, we take our places at the table of the Suicide Club."

Colonel Geraldine fell upon his knees.

"Will Your Highness take my life?" he cried. "It is his—his freely; but do not, oh, do not, let him ask me to countenance so terrible a risk."

"Colonel Geraldine," replied the Prince, with some haughtiness of manner, "your life is absolutely your own. I only looked for obedience; and when that is unwillingly rendered, I shall look for that no longer. I add one word; your importunity in this affair has been sufficient."

The master of the horse regained his feet at once. "Your Highness," he said, "may I be excused in my attendance this afternoon? I dare not, as an honorable man, venture a second time into that fatal house until I have perfectly ordered my affairs. Your Highness shall meet, I promise him, with no more opposition from the most devoted and grateful of his servants."

"My dear Geraldine," returned Prince Florizel, "I always regret when you oblige me to remember my rank. Dispose of your day as you think fit, but be here before 11 in the same disguise."

The club, on this second evening, was not so fully attended; and when Geraldine and the Prince arrived, there were not above half a dozen persons in the smoking room. His Highness took the president aside and congratulated him warmly on the demise of Mr. Malthus.

"I like," he said, "to meet with capacity and certainly find much of it in you. Your profession is of a very delicate nature, but I see you are well qualified to conduct it with success and secrecy."

The president was somewhat affected by these compliments from one of His Highness' superior bearing. He acknowledged them almost with humility.

"Poor Malthy!" he added, "I shall hardly know the club without him. The most of my patrons are boys, sir, and poetical boys who are not much company for me. Not but what Malthy had some poetry, too; but it was of a kind that I could understand."

"I can readily imagine you should find yourself in sympathy with Mr. Malthus," returned the Prince. "He struck me as a man of a very original disposition."

The young man of the cream tarts was in the room, but painfully depressed and silent. His late companions sought in vain to lead him into conversation.

"How bitterly I wish," he cried, "that I had never brought you to this infamous abode! Begone, while you are clean-handed. If you could have heard the old man scream as he fell, and the noise of his bones upon the pavement! Wish me, if you have any kindness to so fallen a being—wish the ace of spades for me to-night!"

BEAUTY QUESTIONS

By MLLE. LA JOLIE

To Develop the Bust

Dear Mademoiselle:—

When I see girls to whom nature has generously given a beautiful figure, I feel like crying from envy. If there is anything you can recommend to build up my poor flat chest, you will gain the everlasting gratitude of Mary J.

You are not the only reader of my column who wishes to develop the bust, for I have many letters, both from girls and young women, where the development has been retarded, as well as from mothers, where the breasts were flabby and shrunken after the baby was weaned.

I am glad to say that there is one safe and effective means of relieving this condition, and that is the prescription of Dr. Kelly, a woman physician, who used this formula herself, increasing her own bust measurement several inches in a few weeks, and also prescribed it for her patients with almost invariable success.

This prescription is put up by the Dr. Kelly Co, and they tell me that they will send a 50c. treatment free of charge to any of my correspondents who will write them. Send ten cents in stamps or silver for distribution expenses to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept 27-P., Buffalo, N. Y., and I am sure you will be greatly pleased with the result of the treatment they will send you. This acts on the bust only, and does not increase the hips or other measurements, simply giving the generous development that is demanded in the present styles, yet keeping the balance of the figure slender.

WOMEN! HOW TO GAIN FLESH
Mme. Lina Cavalieri will tell you the best way to acquire graceful lines and a plump figure. Full details supplied free to all who read

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The outlook for the bank statement on Saturday is that a further contraction in loans will be shown, together with at least a moderate increase in the reserve. The enigma is the deposit account.

$ $ $

Though bears are at times permitted an inning a continuation of the quiet bullish policy is looked for in the stock market, as it is not the intention to hurry matters at all, there being no necessity for it. Specific irregularity may be noted from time to time, but this will not interfere with the general upward progress.

$ $ $

There seems to be [illegible] ing the market by its broadest scope to anticipate broader and stronger conditions the moment [illegible] the banks, therefore, are in shape to finance an upward movement.

$ $ $

The Morgan [illegible] is enthusiastically bullish. They say the decline of last Summer was due to the high cost of living and to fear of the Supreme Court decisions on leading trust cases; now that the cost of living is being reduced, even though temporarily, and now that the Government has adopted a policy that takes all the sting out of any possible decision of the Supreme Court, the only logical thing for the market to do is to advance.

$ $ $

Negotiations more or less tentative are in progress for the importations of gold. If exports continue to increase the yellow metal will come here naturally, but it may be said that no special efforts will be made to secure it for fear that the Bank of England might retaliate by advancing its discount rate still further.

$ $ $

Although the political situation in the British Isles is not of the best, the idea is entertained that it will have the effect of bringing English money here for investment. In fact, the buying of American stocks by our British cousins is gratifyingly large already.

$ $ $

Comment has been caused by the fact in the current gossip about railroad stocks whose dividends may have to be reduced on account of declining earnings Atchison is no longer mentioned. The present rate seems to be safe enough, so far as any one knows. Atchison is one of the stocks around which there is some talk of [illegible]

$ $ $

[illegible] Consolidated's dividend requirements will be approximately $7,200,000 per year, there being approximately 3,600,000 shares outstanding. With the disbursement just made on October 31 the company has paid approximately $11,000,000. It costs $11.10 per ton to get the ore out and it has been yielding $47 to the ton. Dividends appear to be safe. During the fiscal year ending October 31 gross output was $10,530,000 gold, making this the largest single producer in the world.

$ $ $

It is understood that the October profits of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Company were sufficient to show a full quarter's dividend earned. The price of spelter is now 5 and 5.10 cents per pound and the company could maintain present dividends with spelter selling at five cents. Trade conditions are improving, and the outlook favors even higher prices for spelter.

$ $ $

Iron Age says: The conflicting reports concerning the policy of the railroads in the purchase of rails and equipment are evidently due to the fact that each road will be governed by its own condition and needs. What has come out indicates that while some roads will buy little, others are now considering purchases of considerable amount.

$ $ $

Pittsburg is once more inclined to look kindly upon Steel, houses with Smoky City connections having some good sized buying orders. Representatives of some of the larger roads are now dickering for large deliveries in 1911, and the closing of large contracts within a short while is expected.

Whitley Savings Bank has declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 2¼ per cent., payable November 25.

ASKS HUSBAND'S ARREST FOR PRAYING

WORCESTER, Nov. 17.—The Rev. William H. Davenport, forty-two, pastor of Zion A. M. E. Church, was arrested on complaint of his wife for assault and battery. His wife told the police that he spent all his time praying and she wanted him arrested. The police refused to make the arrest, and she then made a formal complaint for assault.

ROXBURY GRASS FIRE DOES $6,000 DAMAGE

A fire caused, the police say, by a spark from a locomotive which ignited grass near a freight shed in West Roxbury, resulted in the burning of the hay and grain shed of William T. McLaughlin, a one-story wooden structure, together with a freight car sidetracked alongside the shed. The loss is placed at $6,000.

STREET CARS HELD UP IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 17.—Two masked highwaymen held up two street cars, rifled the passengers and then escaped after a running pistol battle with the police here early to-day. The highwaymen got considerable money and a quantity of jewelry. Policemen gave chase and a score of shots were fired.

$3,500,000 BIRTHDAY GIFT BY CARNEGIE

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—To celebrate his seventy-fifth birthday this week, Andrew Carnegie will give $3,500,000 more to the Carnegie Technology Schools in this city, of which $1,500,000 will be put at once into buildings and equipment and $2,000,000 as endowment.

THE INDIAN OF TO-DAY

THE progress made by the Indian during the past fifteen years has been greater than in any similar period. He has advanced in civilization and acquired a working knowledge of various arts and industries which help to provide for his maintenance. Twenty-five per cent. more Indians are self-supporting than ten years ago; more than this number speak enough English for ordinary purposes, and there are no tribes idle. Many redmen are engaged in lumbering, mining, working on railroads, digging irrigation ditches, and most of them wear citizens' clothes. At the agencies all the Indians are dressed in this way, and the return of large numbers of young Indians clothed as white men is gradually wearing away the prejudices of the older Indians who remain at home while the children are at school.—[illegible]ress Magazine.

MARKET WEAK, WITH LOSSES

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Pronounced weakness prevailed throughout the general list during the early trading in Wall street to-day, with practically every issue showing losses from a fraction to a point and over and in one instance to 2 points. Great Northern preferred was the feature of to-day's downward movement, dropping 2 points during the first twenty minutes of trading. Despite this drop trading in this issue continued active. The same conditions prevailed throughout the list. Union Pacific dropped nearly 2 points. Weakness in this stock was due to a rumor that the company was preparing to announce some new financing. St. Paul was also extremely weak, opening 1½ points below the close. Northern Pacific was another of the Hill group to tumble backward, with a loss at the opening of over a point.

Steel common opened strong, crossing 80, but later fell back ⅝ of a point, but the trading was strong. The losses in these stocks influenced the others and less important shares.

The copper stocks were irregular. Extreme activity prevailed on the curb market during the early trading with slight fractional gains, silver stocks were strong.

Americans eased up a bit in London, but later developed strength.

BOSTON BOY MAY LEAD GREEN TEAM

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 17.—When the members of the Dartmouth varsity football team return to Hanover next week, the captain for next year will be elected. The contest will be between Edward J. Daley, left end for the last two years, and Walter Eleock, right guard. Both men will be seniors next season. Daley comes from North Stratford, N. H., and Eleock hails from Boston.

HARVARD-YALE GAME HERE

The Harvard-Yale football game will be reproduced at Steinert Hall Saturday afternoon, with full and accurate description of each play shown on the Wilcox patent score board. Every play will be received by a special wire from the field, and announced to the audience by a former Harvard football player. The comfort and welfare of the patrons will be looked after by Larry Hanrahan and [illegible] Meehan.

JAIL THREAT IN TRUST CASES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Thoroughly angered by actions of the so-called "Window Glass Trust," Attorney-General Wickersham has intimated that "in future prosecutions under the anti-trust law, the Federal Department of Justice will insist on jail sentences for trust officials." He also indulges in a criticism of what he terms the "mistaken leniency" of the court before which the trust officials were tried, in imposing fines of $500 each on the individual officers and on one of $2,500 on the corporation.

The cause of Mr. Wickersham's anger was a newspaper dispatch from Pittsburg to the effect that the corporations combined in the trust had served notice on their employes that a wage reduction of 30 per cent. was the only condition under which the factories could continue to manufacture.

The dispatch said the corporations attributed this ultimatum directly to the successful prosecution of the combination by the Department of Justice.

SPEEDY RETRIBUTION OVERTAKES THIRSTY PURLOINER OF MILK

Fred LeClair, saying he had no permanent home, to-day stole two quarts of milk. Unfortunately one of the quarts was taken from the stoop of Patrolman Charles A. Stickney, of South Boston. The law moved with incredible speed. LeClair was brought before Judge Fallon in the police court to-day. He was fined $10 for each quart. He didn't have the $20, so is going to work it out at Deer Island.

EXPLAINS WORK OF BOSTON-1915 MOVE

WELLESLEY, Nov. 17.—An enthusiastic Boston-1915 meeting was held at the Maugus Club, James P. Munroe, executive director of the Boston-1915 movement, being the speaker. C. C. Ferris of Wellesley, president of Gilchrist Company, presided over the meeting. Mr. Munroe told of what is being done in the way of stamping out evils such as sweat shops and protecting women and children in the industries, and explained the extension of the "white list," so-called, to restaurants, so that people may have some idea of what they eat.

MORGAN MISSED BY "OLD BOYS"

Sixty members of the Old School Boys' Association attended the thirtieth banquet of that organization at Young's Hotel. J. P. Morgan, financier and old Boston Latin school boy, sent a letter of regret. J. Mitchell Galvin was elected president.

President Henry M. Rogers told how the association had its origin thirty years ago in the very place the company was seated, when Frederick O. Prince, then Mayor of Boston, presided and Henry K. Oliver of Salem, born in 1800, delivered one of the best speeches made on the occasion.

Other officers elected were: Charles C. Kurtz, vice-president; E. D. Eldridge, secretary-treasurer; Darius Cobb, Erastus B. Badger, W. H. Lincoln, Albert S. Austin, James S. Willis, William H. Hill, William H. Brewer, Isaac Chase and John A. Lamson, directors; John A. Lamson, historian; H. H. Kimball, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The party enjoyed a banquet and Henry Clay Barnabee sang.

AMERICAN WANT "ADS" BRING QUICK RESULTS

GREAT INCREASE IN AUTOMOBILES

By J. C. KERRISON.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, says: "Ten years ago there were about 3,500 machines in America; now there are 400,000.

"Ten years ago there were 27 factories (200 cars being a record annual production for any one of them); now we have almost 100 producing factories. An annual production of 15,000 and even 25,000 cars in one factory is not unusual.

"In a decade capital invested in the industry has increased from $6,200,000 to $450,000,000, of which $275,000,000 is in motor car factories alone.

"Ten years ago the number of persons employed in making automobiles and accessories was estimated at 2,000; now there are 278,000 employes, including those in salesrooms and garages.

"Ten years ago there were probably 800 chauffeurs in New York State, which now supports almost 25,000 registered drivers.

"Automobile row in New York in 1900 showed 14 different makes of cars; now there are 84.

"Ten years ago the average price of cars was $1,100; then it ran up to $2,137 in 1907, after which, with the increase in the number of moderate-priced machines, it has come down to $1,545, although the very high-grade cars are selling at even higher prices than they were two years ago.

"Motor cars are certain to increase in number, solely on account of their utility, without regard to pleasure use. Every farmer needs one, and government reports show more than 5,000,000 farms in this country. We know that every doctor must have one, and there are 7,700 in New York City alone, and 140,000 in the United States. Every contractor, every suburban real estate agent, and if the truth be really told, every man, if not an owner now, hopes to some time operate his own motor car. In the nation there are 997,000 families, with an annual income of $3,000 or more. It is believed that America will continue to buy annually 200,000 motor cars of all types.

"Naturally, the greatest field for motors in the future is for the freight carrying cars, which offer the solution of those many problems involved in our present wasteful method of transferring merchandise by horse-driven vehicles. There are at present 7,000,000 horse-drawn vehicles in use in this country, while an average of 900,000 horse-drawn vehicles are being made every year to be supplanted by motor cars. In addition, the government census shows 31,000,000 horses awaiting well-deserved relief from their drudgery."

Owing to the contests in the Commercial lines, the truck question has come forth very prominently before the public. Possibly very few people know the Metzger Motor Car Company of Detroit is one of the largest builders of trucks in the United States. They recently closed a contract with the Burns Bros., the largest coal dealers in New York, for ten ten-ton trucks, and their truck department is one of the busiest spots about the factory. The new building is now in the course of construction, into which this truck industry will be located apart from the pleasure vehicle end, and while at the present time it has no effect on the Everitt output, and as the truck business increases and the pleasure car business increases, there will be ample room to take care of both.

He Who Hates Hanging Is Not Necessarily a Mollycoddle

And the Defenders of Capital Punishment Recall Those That Defended Torture of Witnesses in the Old Days

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

We quote below a published statement attributed to Judge Goff of New York concerning civilization's habit of public murdering under legal forms those found guilty of illegal private murder.

While emphasizing the fact that, like all who know Judge Goff, we feel for him great respect and affection, we must say that we do not agree with the judge's stern views of capital punishment. Judge Goff is quoted as follows:

> Hysteria is the basis of the recurring agitation in favor of substituting life imprisonment for the death penalty. In this country we are quite indifferent to violence in all its lawless forms. It is not until the worst member of the community, the murderer, is threatened with execution that a protest is heard in the land. Let the law, after giving to the accused every advantage, find a man guilty of slaying another, there arise thousands of maudlin pleas for mercy. Americans have little regard for life except when it is claimed by due process of law.

It is always the same old cry when any reform is suggested involving less hard and cruel punishment for criminals and others.

When flogging in the navy was abolished, those that did away with it were called mollycoddles and were told that a navy unflogged would be impossible. But experience proves that it isn't impossible.

When the cruel whipping and brutalization of children is criticised, there are always fathers and teachers who assure you that beating children is an excellent thing, entirely necessary, and this in spite of the fact that the greatest men have been themselves most kindly treated as children and did not have the courage and manhood beaten out of them when young.

It is only a little more than one hundred years since so-called civilization abandoned the torture of witnesses. Before the French Revolution, and after the Revolution in certain countries, when the rich man was accused of a crime, his servants, entirely innocent, were "put to the question," that is to say TORTURED, to make them tell the truth. Under the old French law witnesses accused of no crime were tortured habitually and brutally. This inevitably made them tell all that they knew and a good deal that they did not know.

Many a man was executed because his servants or other witnesses were tortured until they invented lies that the prosecution wanted and that insured the execution of the accused man.

Before this torturing of witnesses was abolished, many men denounced it, as many men now denounce capital punishment.

They showed that torturing witnesses made them swear falsely to escape torture and encouraged perjury.

They were called mollycoddles. They were told "You MUST torture witnesses or you won't get the truth out of them." Those that objected to the torture, which had existed since the earliest days, were sneered at as sentimentalists.

The advocates of capital punishment declare that nothing else will discourage murder, and suggest that almost everybody would be tempted to commit murder occasionally if the noose, the axe, the electric chair and the guillotine were not before the would-be murderer's eyes.

This is not true. In Switzerland, where capital punishment does not exist, there are not one-quarter as many murders committed as in America, where the gallows and the electric chair flourish.

And in at least one of the American States, where capital punishment is not inflicted, there are no murder epidemics.

This newspaper favors the abolition of capital punishment—not for the sake of the murderers, but for the sake of civilization, for the sake of the public.

You personally would not kill a man. You would abhor the idea of your brother or your father killing a human being. Why delegate to the government that represents you the task of killing, of legally murdering, which you yourself would shun?

The old rulers felt great pride in their record of murder. Listen to the proud proclamation of Sanherib, an ancient king: "I have taken cities by storm and I have made of them heaps of cinders. I have swept the country as with a broom and have changed it into a desert."

Listen to another description of achievement by an old king, found in a document known to scientists as the cylinder of Taylor: "My chariots of war, crushing men and beasts, ground up the bodies of my enemies. I made for myself monuments of corpses from which the extremities had been cut. I cut both hands from all of those that fell alive into my power."

And there was nothing of the mollycoddle about the old King Assurbanipal, who ruled before great Nineveh had sunk beneath the desert. This king said of the enemy that opposed him: "He fell alive into my hands and I had him skinned alive. I had the eyes torn from the head of his son. But instead of throwing him to the dogs I had him walled up in the gate of the sun at Nineveh."

Thus spoke the rulers of old, and they would have laughed at any "perverted sentimentalist" had any dared to criticise such horrible ferocity.

Modern rulers don't have their enemies skinned alive nor tear out the eyes of their enemies' children, yet this has not made the lives of rulers any less secure, nor the reputations of conquerors any less glorious.

Old Assurbanipal would have told you that he could not enjoy life or kingship if he could not skin his enemies. And an Apache chief would have told you that he might as well be a squaw and be done with it if you forbade him to tear the scalp from his neighbor's skull. Yet men are brave and patriotic to-day, although deprived of the scalping and skinning excitements. And civilization will be secure, and murder will become more rare and eventually disappear entirely in a future civilization that will consider a legal killing as atrocious as skinning alive, and infinitely more abominable than individual murder by an abnormal criminal.

Murders will be committed by private individuals as long as government sets the example of murder.

While human society as a whole says to the criminal individual "I will kill you and under certain circumstances," just so long the criminal will feel that he may also kill "under certain circumstances," since government sets him an example.

The abolition of capital punishment must and will come before the abolition of private killing.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES OF The College Girl at Home

By Winifred Black

Does the college girl make for happiness in the home? inquires a distracted correspondent.

It depends upon the college girl, it seems to me, and upon the home, too, when you come right down to it.

The average college girl is usually just about as happy and as contented as a chicken in the middle of a duck pond when she first comes home from college.

She's used to doing things and seeing things and to talking things over. She takes herself rather seriously, as a rule, and when she meets the other college girls she asks them "what they are going to take up this Winter." She never expects them to take up mother and the boys or father and the little girls. That wouldn't be quite scientific enough.

She's homesick at first. College sick, her father calls it, when he catches mother having a quiet little weep because daughter is so discontented at home. But some day she wakes up and finds out that mother and the boys are really a whole lot more interesting than the newest theory on higher education or the latest experiment in the social settlement work, and she begins to realize that the college world was just a little imitation world after all, and that she's out in the real country now and that it is time for her to be a real person. In two months after she's come home you wouldn't know she was a college girl if it wasn't for her sweater, and by the end of six months she's really human.

No, college never hurt any girl who was worth worrying about, and it has done a whole lot of ambitious young persons a great deal of goood by taking them away from their admiring families and letting them compete with those who had something to do besides adore them.

Yes, the college girl makes for happiness in the home, dear correspondent, if she's the right kind of a girl, and if she is the right kind of a girl it will take a whole lot of the wrong kind of college to spoil her.

You will find half the battle is gained if you never allow yourself to say anything gloomy.—L. M. Child.

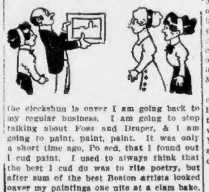
Little Bobbie

He Writes About His Pa's Paintings

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I AM glad that the eleckshun is oaver, Pa sed, wen he caim hoam yesterday morning. It has been a long time since I have had so much fun & lost so littel munny as I have lost in this campaign, but on the other hand the constant talking has made grate inroads into my helth. I feel like an old man this morning, Pa sed. You look it, too, sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, in any event, now that the eleckshun is oaver I am going back to my regular business. I am going to stop talking about Foss and Draper, & I am going to paint, paint, paint. It was only a short time ago, Pa sed, that I found out I cud paint. I used to always think that the best I cud do was to rite poetry, but after sum of the best Boston artists looked oaver my paintings one nite at a clam bake, I took hart & beegan to paint picters. Tonite, wife, sed Pa, I am going to un-vail three of my picters, & sum of our frends is going to be here & see them.



I have saw moar than one occasion, Ma sed, wen yure frends was here to see yure brilyunt geenyus unfurled to the winds, but sumhow you nevver seemed to maik much of a hit. I hoap that tonite, Ma sed, you will maik sum kind of a impresshun. I will, sed Pa.

Well, that was all that Pa sed, but sure enuff, that nite the nabors caim in. Pa was vary happy to see that everybody was there, & he beegan for to un-vail his picters.

This first picter, Pa sed, is a picter of sum merit. It took me four months to paint this, Pa sed, & I call it The Dawn of Reason. The yung gurl in the picter is reesoning with her husband, Pa sed, & the husband is jest gitting the offis. Note how butiful she is, sed Pa, haw butiful & yet how modest. Wud you beleeve me, frends, Pa sed, that littel gurl posed every day for a month for that picter, & she nevver winked at me onst.

See here, sed Ma, wen did all this beegin for to happen. I nevver, nevver knew Ma, sed, wen you had a model at yure offis. You did tell me, sed Ma, that you had a stenograffer for two weeks wen you was writing a lot of stalls to yure creditors, but I saw her, & she had a cross eye on one side of her face & a strate eye on the other, & her mouth was like the mouth of a swan, Ma sed, kind of long & toothless. But how about this model?

The next picter, sed Pa rite quick, is called Working at The Forge. It shows a honest blacksmith making a horseshoe. In the background stands his littel daughter, watching her braiv father shoeing a ox. You will note the butiful face of the blacksmith's daughter, Pa sed, & the butiful complexshun wich I have put on her, & the willowy, gurlish figger of her. Poor littel queen, sed Pa, I kept her standing out in front of that blacksmith shop scene for four strate weeks.

I think that will do, sed Ma. Ma's face was as red as a beet, & she looked at Pa the way she looks at him wen he cums hoam from the lodge looking for lodging.

Pa isent going to paint any moar.

Some New Books

By WEX JONES

WHY? By T. Roosevelt. This unique volume consists of 1,000 pages. All of them are blank, except one, and on that one appears nothing but the symbol "?".

The Frozen North. By A. Hunter. As the novel name indicates, The Frozen North deals with the land to the north of us. The author recommends a hunting trip to Greenland as a bracer for the anemic city dweller. The favorite diversion of the party, and one that, by reason of its call for activity and skill in moderation, is especially suited to the weary office worker is lassoing polar bears. The author used a large power boat for this and lassoed the game with a heavy hand line. As Mr. Hunter was obtaining specimens for the zoo, his methods were justified to some extent, but they could not be followed by one hunting the polar bear for sport. The proper equipment is a trout rod and light line, with a small noose on the end. Fishing from a small canoe, the sportsman will get excellent fun from a full-grown bear, especially when both bear and hunter get upon the same piece of ice. It requires real skill to check the rushes of an excited bear with a light rod, more particularly when the bear is rushing toward the hunter. The lure of the North is well expressed in the author's final apostrophe: "O, Land of the Warm Heart and Frozen Feet; Land of the Cheap Ice and Expensive Coal; Land of the Midnight Sun and the Industrious Daughter; Land of High Degrees and Low Temperatures, how can I leave thee?" Reply by steamship from Etah.

British Humour. By C. R. J. Twickenham Smyth. An important treatise on a grave subject. In a scholarly manner Mr. Twickenham-Smyth traces the history of British Humour from the earliest known joke by Alfred the Great. Alfred, the student will remember, was set by a peasant woman to watch some cakes. He forgot his charge and allowed the cakes to burn. When the woman returned she remarked to Alfred: "I told yer to 'eat them cakes, not to burn them." To which Alfred humorously replied: 'Well, I'll h'eat them, burned as they are." This, as Mr. Twickenham-Smyth, very truly says, is the foundation-stone of all British Humour, and any reader who does not appreciate it thoroughly had better give up any hope of further study. Mr. Twickenham-Smyth brings his book down to the example best known over here, Punch's "Advice to Those About to Marry: Don't." He points out the utter absurdity of this advice. "Persons about to marry," says the author, "would not break off their engagements on the mere word of a buffoon, and if they wouldn't then there can be nothing humorous in the situation." "Waiting at the Church" he considers richly humorous. From which it appears that humour is vastly different from humor.
